House Puts Merger No. 1 Into Effect, 264 to 128

Warren Declares '4 or 5 Other Plans' For Reorganization Are Being Studied

By Robert C. Albright.

The House yesterday clinched Congressional approval of the President's initial reorganization plan by routing, 264 to 128, a Republican move to block the three-way works-welfare-lending mergers.

The vote, in which House Democrats lined up solidly behind the President, means the Administration's reorganization plan No. 1 will become automatically operative June 24. House rules permit no further vote on the plan and Senate action is unneeded.

The test came on a concurrent resolution of disapproval introduced last week by Representative Taber (Republican), of New York. Taber charged the plan will "destroy efficiency of government and mess up temporary agencies with permanent activities."

Democrats Talk Little

Confident the resolution would be defeated, Democratic leaders let Republicans do the talking and used up only a few minutes of the time allotted them. Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, coauthor of the reorganization act, took the floor briefly at the close to warn members that "a vote to overturn this plan is a vote against any reorganization whatever."

Warren told the House "four or five" additional reorganization plans are under study, not all of which will be submitted this session. Two additional plans, one dealing with inter-departmental shifts and the other providing consolidations within departments, are expected from the White House in the next few days.

The initial plan approved in effect yesterday (subject to a 60-day layover ending June 24), consolidates welfare, works and lending activities under three independent Federal agencies, and centralizes Budget Bureau powers under the White House.

The Agencies Affected

A new Federal Works agency will embrace WPA, PWA, Bureau of Public Roads, Public Buildings branch of the Treasury Procurement Division, most of the Buildings branch of the National Park Service and the United States Housing Authority.

The new Federal Security agency will include the Employment Service, Office of Education, Public Health Service, National Youth Administration, Social Security Board and the CCC.

The new Federal Loan agency will blanket the RFC, Electric Home and Farm Authority, Disaster Loan Corporation, RFC Mortgage Co., Federal National Mortgage Association, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, HOLC, Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, the FHA and the Export-Import Bank.

To the Agriculture Department, would go the Farm Credit Administration, the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation and the Commodity Credit Corporation. Besides the Budget Bureau, transferred to the White House would be the Central Statistical Board, National Resources Planning Board and functions of the Central Statistical Committee.

28 of G. O. P. for Bill

Action came eight days after the plan was submitted by the President on April 25. Leaders decided to take the short cut to approval when Taber made an early vote possible by introducing his disapproval motion.

Not a single Democratic vote was cast for the Taber resolution. Joining 232 Democrats in support of the President's plan were 28 Republicans, 1 Farmer-Laborite, 1

Mrs. Roosevelt Approves 8 Costumes for Royal Visit

Mrs. Roosevelt is fitted in New York

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 3.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today approved eight new costumes which she will wear during the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in Washington and Hyde Park next month. The selection included two evening gowns, two daytime ensembles, two tailored dinner gowns, a garden party frock and a thin figured silk daytime dress.

Mrs. Roosevelt devoted two hours to trying on these costumes at a Fifth avenue store—more time than she has given to clothes at one time since her husband was elected President. She also selected numerous sport dresses, hats, bags and gloves.

For the two formal dinners planned during the visit of the King and Queen in Washington, Mrs. Roosevelt has ordered one gown of chiffon, another of natural

Way Is Paved For State Cuts In Job Levy

House Committee Approves Reduction if Reserve Is Adequate

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday paved the way for general State-wide reductions in unemployment insurance taxes on employers by approving an amendment permitting such cuts by States once "adequate reserves" are established.

While the new formula ordered no direct reduction in the Federal tax rate of 3 per cent, the proposed step would have the same effect in easing levies on employers in States having adequate unemployment insurance reserves and a "favorable employment experience."

Chairman Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, called it "more desirable" than a direct cut in the Federal rate.

It was the second time in a week the committee had moved to modify so-called tax "deterrents" in the social security law. Recently the committee unanimously voted to "freeze" the present 3 per cent old-age insurance tax on employers and workers for three years, abandoning scheduled stepups.

Moving toward completion of a new social security bill, the committee approved other far-reaching changes in the law, tightening exemptions, moving up the effective date of old-age benefits, and placing a $3,000 top on wages subject to the unemployment compensation tax.

Doughton estimated this limit on wages subject to the tax alone would save employers an estimated $60,000,000 a year. A similar $3,000 "top" already exists on wages subject to the old-age-insurance tax.

Other changes voted by the committee:

WPA Strike Called At Greenville, S. C.

Charles Edison Seriously Ill

White House officials revealed yesterday that Charles Edison, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, is so seriously ill in New York that it will be several months before he will be able to return to his post. The exact nature of his illness was not learned immediately, but his sight has become impaired. Edison is the son of the inventor, Thomas Alva Edison.

U. S. Agencies Asked to Judge Fair Trade Bill

House Sub-Committee To Call Witnesses From FTC, Justice Dept.

The Federal Trade Commission and the antitrust division of the Justice Department will be asked to evaluate the fair trade bill now before a sub-committee of the House District Committee, it was decided yesterday after witnesses clashed at a hearing on the proposed measure.

"I'll tell you right now they will oppose the bill because it would shear them of some of their bureaucratic powers," Rowland Jones, jr., Washington representative of the National Association of Retail Druggists, declared.

Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, member of the sub-committee, interrupted to declare: "I want to hear what those agencies have to say. Even if I am a Republican, I have a lot of faith in the Government. I insist that we call them in."

Tydings Defended

Charges of misrepresentation by both sides and promises of "disclosures of false testimony" flew back and forth in the committee room after Eugene Casey, who said he was representing the Maryland and National Farm Grange, declared the measure to be an offshoot of the Miller-Tydings national fair trade bill.

And this, he charged, was "pushed through Congress" with the help of the McKesson-Robbins Drug Co.

Doctor Accused Of Giving Poison, Prospects to Ring

Philadelphia, May 3 (U.P.).—Arrest of additional physicians was hinted tonight as authorities investigating a "merchants of death" syndicate questioned a North Philadelphia doctor charged with supplying poison and prospects to a ring accused of at least 100 murders for life insurance.

The physician arrested today is Dr. Horace D. Perlman, 50, who was held without bail for further hearing May 24 on a charge of "being an accessory before and after the fact in homicide."

Detectives raided the physician's office, and stripped it of equipment, books, records, drugs and filing cabinets, which were taken to city hall.

Assistant District Attorney Vincent P. McDevitt was "not prepared" to state how many deaths Dr. Perlman allegedly was involved in. He told the court the physician "was an active participant in the ring in that he furnished poison and obtained prospects for the ring."

Laws and Recovery Are Central Topics Of Meeting Here; Wagner Act Up

SYNTHETIC RUBBER which might replace the real product to large extent in case of emergency was described at the United States Chamber of Commerce session here.

Commissioner of Patents Coe warned that the patent system may be wrecked unless a program is agreed on to correct known defects.

The Business Front

By Felix Cotten.

How business recovery may be attained was the central theme as more than 300 members of Congress chatted last night with 1,500 business leaders at 28 State and regional dinners arranged by the United States Chamber of Commerce as part of its annual meeting here.

It was the biggest get-together of Congressmen and businessmen ever held. The latter, gathered here from 46 States for the Chamber of Commerce meeting, related to their national representatives their own individual experiences with the operation of New Deal laws, many of which they inveighed against during the meeting.

Senators and Representatives, in turn, expressed their own viewpoint as legislators. In some cases, businessmen were reminded that the "radical" legislation of former decades had become conservative bulwarks of democracy, to be defended and preserved. There were admonitions that a legislator, if he does his job efficiently, must consider problems from the standpoint of national rather than sectional welfare.

Burke Assails Labor Board

Other developments were:

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, addressing a luncheon of chamber delegates at the Mayflower Hotel, denounced the National Labor Relations Board as "public enemy No. 1." He declared that "my colleagues and I have just begun to fight," their purpose being to lay the foundations for drastic revision of the labor act later on.

The chamber resolutions committee, working overtime yesterday, drafted resolutions, to be presented at the closing session today for adoption, calling for an overhauling of tax laws, the Wagner act, curtailment of Government spending, cessation of debt increase, greater local responsibility in relief expenditures, and other changes in New Deal laws and administrative policy.

House Told 3 D.C. Dairies DoctorCream

Neutralizers Found In Their Products, Ashworth Testifies At House Inquiry

Price System Assailed

THOMAS H. McINNERNEY, president of National Dairy Products Corporation, declared before the monopoly committee that artificially high prices are responsible for ills of the milk industry and urged "sound prices" in line with the law of supply and demand. He said his business is "punch-drunk" from Government investigation.—Page 12.

Adulteration Charged

By James D. Secrest.

Neutralizers designed to conceal stale cream have been found in the products of three and possibly four Washington dairies recently, Dr. Reid R. Ashworth, chief food inspector of the health department, testified yesterday at the House subcommittee milk investigation.

Dr. Ashworth, asked for the names of the dairies, said he will furnish them for the record today. In one of the cases, he explained, the neutralizer had not been definitely detected.

No Reason for Neutralizer

"There was no reason for the dairy using this neutralizer," he said, "unless they had old cream on hand."

Other developments in connection with the Congressional milk inquiry were:

Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal filed charges in Police Court of violation of the milk act against Southern Dairies, Inc., the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, the Fairfield-Western Maryland Dairy, of Baltimore, and the Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers Association.

Ashworth testified that the Health Department had been given a "run around" by cream "bootleggers" but that none had been caught by his inspectors.

J. Edward Burroughs, special counsel of the sub-committee, asked Ashworth whether he knew of a practice of distributors giving inspectors automobile heaters, radios and tires. Ashworth said he didn't.

Sefton Darr, attorney for Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, attacked the District milk regulations as too strict and cited Commerce Department statistics to show that Washington infant mortality rate is much higher than that of Midwestern cities.

Seal Again Questioned

Dr. Ashworth was on the stand and under cross-examination, which was at times severe, throughout the day. Like the health department officials who preceded him he defended the local regulations and system of scoring producers and distributors, but admitted the latter could be improved.

For a few minutes at the opening of the hearing, Seal was questioned by Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, as to the case involving the two dairies and two producers associations. Shafer-

French Mission Arrives to Pave Way for Buying War Materials

Will Survey American Industries And Instruct as to Needs; U. S. Navy Raises Enlistment Term

By J. Gilbert Norris.

A special French mission has arrived in this country to instruct American industry on French military needs and pave the way for large war orders in case trouble breaks out in Europe.

Announcement of its presence here was made by the War Department following a call made by the group upon Assistant Secretary of War Johnson. While the Department's announcement simplye said it understood the delegation was here "with a view to the possible purchase of munitions," Lieut. Col. Emmanuel Lombard, the French military attache, said the mission would make a survey of American industry and then "perhaps" give some small orders to gear plants to produce large orders in war-time which will meet French Army specifications.

"The orders would be what your Army calls 'educational' contracts under which the plants procure the necessary jigs and gages and dies which will enable them to produce large orders," he said, no big contracts are contemplated as we could not afford them now."

Meanwhile, the Administration's drive to complete American rearmament plans went forward at rapid tempo. With the signature of President Roosevelt, a supplemental defense appropriation bill became law, carrying funds for equiping an army of 400,000 with latest type weapons and equipment. The $153,000,000 measure will permit the Army to buy or contract for the second increment of the emergency defense program—new tanks, semi-automatic rifles, artillery and other equipment costing $110,000,000.

Other developments:

The Navy Department raised the period of first enlistment from four to six years, and barred further enlistments under 18 years in a move to further the efficiency of ship's crews.

After a short hearing and but brief discussion, the House Naval Affairs Committee approved a bill to authorize major overhauls for five battleships. Under the measure a total of $8,850,000 will be spent to put the Tennessee, California, Colorado, Maryland and West Virginia in best fighting trim.

British Want Roosevelt To Lead 31 Nations In New Offer to Hitler

Stalin Drops Litvinoff, Alliances' Advocate

Molotoff Succeeds Him; Reaction on British Pact Seen

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, May 3.—The Soviet government tonight disclosed Maxim Litvinoff, veteran representative of Soviet Russia at Europe's council tables, had been supplanted as commissar for foreign affairs.

Vyacheslaff Molotoff, chairman of the Council of People's Commissars, was given the foreign affairs commissariat to add to his previous duties. An official radio broadcast said Litvinoff had been "released at his own request."

The veteran diplomat had been in virtual charge of the commissariat since 1921, and his "release" produced a sensation among foreign diplomats in Moscow as well as the Soviet public.

Envoys were reluctant to give a hasty opinion of what it portends but they agreed a vital turn in Russian foreign policy appeared to have come.

(In London and Paris, however, it was feared Litvinoff's retirement threatened the collapse of negotiations for an Anglo-French-Soviet

Reich Attempting to Isolate Poland by 'Neutralizing' Baltic

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 3.—Germany moved swiftly today to forestall inclusion of northern European states in the British-French bloc and to isolate Poland, now anxiously considering German demands.

Proposals have been sent to six Scandinavian and Baltic countries for bilateral pacts of non-aggression which foreign office quarters indicated involved pledges on the part of those countries not to favor any other group of nations.

Reports from Sweden said the general impression prevailed that the Scandinavian nations would answer "no" to Hitler's proposals.

There were signs that Norway, at least, favored a rejection of the German proposals on the theory that any pact would be a departure from her traditional neutrality.

Hitler's Demands Rise

Hitler's hopes are that by isolating Poland he will force Polish Foreign Minister Beck to accept his terms.

Responsible quarters indicate that these terms now include more than the mere return to Germany of the Free City of Danzig and the granting of an automobile and rail right-of-way through the Polish corridor to East Prussia—the original German conditions.

The countries Hitler is known to be negotiating with are Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Latvia and Estonia. There was confidence

Barrymore Asks Divorce, Accuses Wife of Fraud Plot

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 3.—John Barrymore brought a double-barreled court action today against Elaine Barrie, his actress-wife, asking a separation and accusing her of conspiring with her mother, Mrs. Edna Jacobs, and financial adviser, David Fisher, to "defraud and deceive" him.

Specifically, the actor demanded an accounting of $300,000.

His suit claimed that the three defendants had been given power, under an agreement of 1935, to use his funds in the purchase of property for him, and that they had refused to turn over to him "any balance thereof remaining in their possession and the property purchased and acquired."

His attorney, Maurice Hotchner, said the actor had told him:

"In every other divorce proceeding brought against me by my (three) previous wives, I have always, out of a sense of chivalry, not contested these suits. But this is different. This time I am taking the initiative."

Landon Backs President's Peace Appeal

Charges, However, That Roosevelt Has Abandoned Neutrality

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 3.—Alf M. Landon declared tonight he was crossing "party lines . . . to support my President" in a world peace conference move, but at the same time he charged Roosevelt had "abandoned neutrality for the United States."

In a nationally broadcast (NBC blue) address on foreign affairs prepared for delivery at the Methodist Uniting Conference, the 1936 Republican Presidential nominee said:

"I think we can and should support the President's appeal for a peace conference and urge him to take such advantages of further discussion as Mr. Hitler's reply offers."

Without particularizing, he commented:

"The President, in so far as he speaks and is able to do so, has abandoned neutrality for the United States."

Arrangements were made to relay the speech to Europe and South America in translation.

While asserting "a great war threatens," Landon saw Hitler's speech to the Reichstag last Friday as leaving "the door slightly open for further discussion of the common destiny of the common people of the world."

He warned "we are heading into dangerous paths," and urged his listeners to "remember that we were involved in the World War by another President who attempted to act as a mediator . . ."

"Notwithstanding this danger," he saw the United States as "the one great power which has the chance to offer something other than the mere choosing up of sides before going into battle."

He pledged his "full support" to "a conference to prevent war," but as-

German Reported Slain by Magyars

Berlin, May 3 (AP).—Prague newspapers reported today that 200 Hungarian soldiers crossed the Slovak border near Nisni Medsev and that a German SS (elite, black-uniformed) trooper was shot.

The reports said the Hungarian troops opened fire when anyone attempted to approach the wounded man who, it was said, was taken back over the border to Hungary, where he died.

Chamberlain Plan Is Reported to Envision Exchange Of Peace Pacts

By William Hillman,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, May 3.—Prime Minister Chamberlain is preparing to sound out President Roosevelt on the possibility of a new and concrete non-aggression proposal from the American President to Reichfuehrer Hitler, it was learned tonight.

Under the plan being envisaged, Roosevelt would suggest to Hitler not only that Germany join in a general treaty to insure many nations against military attack, but that Great Britain and France give the Reich separate, specific guarantees they will not commit aggression against Germany.

The scheme on which Roosevelt is to be sounded out, it was learned, embraces all the 31 nations named in the President's peace message which was rejected by its recipients, Hitler and Premier Mussolini.

Would Trade Pledges

The general pact would involve the granting to Germany and Italy by all the enumerated nations of nonaggression pledges which would be exchanged by similar guarantees forthcoming from Germany and Italy.

Intimations of Chamberlain's intention to attempt another approach to Hitler were made by the premier in speaking in the Commons today when he said the British government is "ready to consider proposals for the exchange of reciprocal assurances with Germany."

It was quickly followed by vigorous expressions of Anglo-American friendship on the part of Parliament in addressing resolutions of loyalty to King George occasioned by the journey he and Queen Elizabeth will embark upon Saturday to Canada and the United States.

U. S. Visit Stressed

The "humble address to the King" was adopted first by the House of Lords. In moving the resolution in Commons, Chamberlain laid particular stress on the American part of their majesties' impending visit, saying:

"The relations between ourselves and the people of the United States have long been of a special character on account of our common language, ideals and traditions. I am sure the visit of their majesties will be greatly welcomed by the American people."

Chamberlain insisted in Commons that there was "no foundation whatsoever" to the Nazi charge that Britain and France are trying to "encircle" Germany and Italy.

He denied the argument advanced by Hitler in his Reichstag speech last Friday that the Anglo-Polish defense pact is inconsistent with the Anglo-German naval treaty torn up by the Reichsfuehrer.

Chamberlain's statement relative to mutual assurances with Germany was made in reply to a question in Commons.

Ready for "Assurances"

"What President Roosevelt proposed," he said, "and what I understand Herr Hitler to have offered is the exchange of assurances of non-aggression, rather than the guaranty on a reciprocal basis, such as that recently given by his majesty's government to the Polish government. His majesty's government would certainly be ready to consider proposals for an exchange of reciprocal assurances with the German government."

Chamberlain said negotiations with Russia and Turkey are continuing but the time is not yet ripe for an announcement. A few hours later came the startling news from

PIPES OF PEACE: So far no American official has hinted even remotely that there's any chance of another American Army sailing overseas in our time . . . Mussolini's son-in-law, Count Ciano, keeps telling foreigners in Rome that Italy wants peace, is frying its own fish in the Balkans, not Germany's . . . After he makes a speech, Hitler can't march until he sees who's scared.

It's a Capital mystery why certain New Deal mouthpieces have been sniping at Attorney General Murphy, who now ranks as FDR's No. 3 New Dealer . . . (Hopkins and Ickes are No. 1 and No. 2.) The best explanation is that Murphy's rapid come-uppance has annoyed other ambitious Rooseveltians.

With FDR, Murphy's still strictly kosher.

Though we're officially past the horse-and-buggy age, a Government official must still justify every airplane journey, in dollars and cents, except in the rarest emergency. Either he must show that the plane fare won't be costlier than train plus pullman and meals, or he must prove a saving to the U. S. A. in his own wages.

He must put it all down in arithmetic and get his chief's okay.

Avidly king-conscious, Washington is chortling that Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, the Manhattan dowager, threw a big party for the Jim Farleys in the hope that Jim would reciprocate by greasing her way to mit the visiting King and Queen . . .

Something funny, odd and strange happens to certain retired Army officers, especially generals. Bereft of command, they seem at loose ends, unhappier and more at sea in mufti than an alumna of Hollywood.

I have in mind such doughty warriors as Generals Mosely, Fries and Smedley Butler, who were topnotch officers, but pop up after retirement as soothsayers in strange causes, alarmists and propagandists, Cassandras and witch-doctors.

There ought to be a remedy. At 64 a general is often a tragedy of unharnessed vigor. He's all geared up, but not meshing. Soon a lot of captains, majors and colonels will be retired in the Army purge for youth, and they'll be younger and in the same plight.

* * * *

Maybe there ought to be a retired Army officer inculcating patriotism or organizing parades or something in each of the 3,000 countries. Since they're on half pay anyhow, it wouldn't cost much extra; Gen. Mosely gets $6,000 Army retirement pay while making pro-Hitler speeches.

Such a solution might keep 'em out of mischief; or it might make fresh mischief.

Home Mortgages For Appraisal in April Total $105,700,000

Average weekly volume of home mortgage insuring operations under FHA continued in April at about the same record level established in the previous month, FHA administrator Stewart McDonald said yesterday.

Small home mortgages selected for appraisal in April totaled approximately $105,700,000, an increase of 12 per cent over the same month last year. About 65 per cent of the number of these mortgages represented homes to be constructed, McDonald said.

Mortgages accepted for insurance in April totaled $65,000,000, compared with $63,485,800 for March, and $63,298,325 for April 1938. Of the amount of mortgages accepted for insurance in the first four months of 1939, approximately 72 per cent covered new houses.

Premium-paying mortgages recorded in April totaled $46,300,000, compared with $50,162,100 for March, a decrease of 8 per cent, and $25,798,400 for April of last year, an increase of 80 per cent. This brings the grand total of small home premium-paying mortgages to slightly less than $1,500,000,000. In addition, the FHA has insured mortgages totaling $89,372,425 on 195 large-scale housing projects.

Property improvement loans reported in April totaled $17,229,437, an increase of 27 per cent over April, 1938.

declared, "are the law firm of Joseph E. Davies."

Davies, the American Ambassador to Belgium, is the father-in-law of Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, co-author of the national bill, which was enacted as a rider on the District appropriations bill.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, author of the District proposal, halted Casey's testimony to point out that by re-electing Senator Tydings after Casey had made "all these allegations last summer," Maryland voters had given their answer to the charges.

Jones, who was supported in yesterday's hearing by Dr. E. F. Kelly, secretary of the American Pharmaceutical Association, declared 44 States had found such legislation beneficial, that it would not raise prices, and that "the independent retailers of this country are entitled to it."

Bargain days and sell-outs would still be possible, if the bill is passed, he declared, and only the "lost leader" practice will be prevented. Stores that offer standard brand trade-marked goods at a loss to get customers into their establishments "to sell them goods on which the profit is plenty" will oppose the measure, he said.

Jones declared the Federal Trade Commission would not be able to bring "any conclusive evidence" before the committee because that agency has never made a Nation-wide study of what the effect of the bill would be. He said $65,000 has been appropriated for such a study.

How "Leaders" Work

"Many large companies have grown rich and powerful by having "leaders" with which they lure in customers. R. H. Macy & Co., of New York, is one. Now, I believe that the person who did all his trading with that company might save money, but I insist that the smaller retailer is not able to take a loss on standard brand goods," he declared.

"Well, if this bill will help keep the small independent merchant in business I'll tell you now I'm for it," Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, declared. "Next to the home, church, and school I would place the neighborhood and crossroads store as an aid to the development of this country. I don't mean the chains. I mean the little stores that carry Tom Jones and his family during emergencies."

Hearings on the bill will be continued next week.

Takoma Meeting Initiates Plans For Town Center

Plans for establishment of a Takoma Park community center were initiated at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last night after a report by Robert Lyon, chairman of the development committee.

A resolution was approved urging the mayor and town council to appoint a committee representing all civic organizations to investigate the possibility of establishing the center.

Appointed to a committee to sponsor a Better Home Contest were Maurice Weidmeyer, J. Douglas Bradshaw, Robert Lohr, John Sidell. A prize will be given the builder of the best Takoma residence in the coming year.

Other resolutions indorsed Ralph Shure for police judge for the thirteenth election district and sponsored the annual Fourth of July celebration and parade.

Roosevelt to Answer Hitler By Backing Cash-Carry Plan

But He'll Ask More Discretionary Power To Deal With Wars

By the Associated Press.

Administration support of the Pittman "cash and carry" neutrality plan, with some modifications increasing the President's discretionary power to deal with foreign wars will constitute President Roosevelt's reply to the speech delivered last week by Chancellor Hitler of Germany, it was learned yesterday.

The President, one of his secretaries said, has been urged to send a special message to Hitler or respond with a radio address, but plans for such a rejoiner have been abandoned.

"In other words, when you get a situation that seems to be a little better balanced, why tip the sacles?" asked the secretary, Stephen Early.

Must Furnish Ships

The Pittman plan would permit belligerent nations to buy anything they chose—whether war supplies or not—in American markets, provided they paid cash and furnished ships to haul their purchases away.

Secretary of State Hull is expected to testify before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in support of

The question of whether the Monroe Doctrine is broad enough to permit the United States to prevent totalitarian infiltration into Latin-American governments brought a sharp division of opinion in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, meanwhile.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, brought up the issue in questioning the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, a witness. Father Walsh had urged a closer union of American stats as an effective contribution to the preservation of world peace.

Point on Doctrine

When Senator Borah asked the educator if he did not believe the Monroe Doctrine was broad enough to cover any effort to prevent the implanting of any foreign system of government in Latin-American countries, the witness said that was true unless such a system were installed voluntarily or by acquiescense of the Latin-American government in question.

Borah agreed that it might be difficult to tell whether the action was taken voluntarily.

"Of course," he said, "if the South American government said it was satisfied, we couldn't say anything, but totalitarian actions in some other countries have been so open and notorious that it has not been difficult to discover them."

Pittman's Views

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, took the position that United States action could be based on its own defense needs.

"If," he said, as an example, "some foreign government should dominate the government of Brazil, build large airfields there and provide an enormous fleet of airplanes that would threaten the Panama Canal, that would be of concern to us."

"I don't know but what we could make another doctrine if we wanted to," Pittman added.

"Isn't the real test," asked Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, "whether or not a foreign government either instigates or controls the change in the South American government?"

"It if affects our safety, we have the right to be the judge," Connally insisted.

Walsh Gives Warning

Father Walsh warned the committee that if the United States attempts to aid one set of European nations against another by "methods short of war" it might not be able to prevent European intervention in South America.

"Can we have both advantages—that of preferred and inviolable position in South America and at the same time offer resistance to a policy exercised overseas by European and Asiatic powers in pursuance of what they deem national welfare and national interests?" the Catholic educator asked.

Declaring that "it may be the better part of wisdom to admit that no satisfactory neutrality law is possible," Father Walsh said he placed "more hope and confidence" in a closer union with the 21 American nations.

Roosevelt's Bodyguard Receives Mementoes From Scandinavian Royalty

President Roosevelt's stalwart bodyguard, Thomas Qualters, likes royalty—and apparently royalty likes Qualters.

QUALTERS

In line of duty, Qualters accompanied the President to his Hyde Park estate where the latter received the Crown Princes of Norway and Denmark.

Prince Frederik of Denmark awarded the Secret Service man with a gold medal in the Order of King Christian with red and white ribbons.

Prince Olav of Norway presented Qualters with a handsome silver cigaret lighter upon which is superimposed in gold the royal crown.

Vice President Garner remained at his hotel yesterday suffering from a slight attack of lumbago. Mrs. Garner said he probably would return to his office today.

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), Indiana, returned to the Capital yesterday after undergoing an abdominal operation at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. He expects to be able to resume his duties shortly.

The House Military Affairs subcommittee recommended yesterday that the Army officer who delivered the historic "Message to Garcia" be permitted to accept a medal from Cuba in recognition of his aid in freeing that country from Spain in 1898. It approved a bill to permit acceptance of the decoration by Maj. Andrew S. Rowan, retired, now ill in a San Francisco hospital.

The message which Rowan delivered to Gen. Calixto Garcia, who headed the Cuban rebellion in Oriente Province, made possible close collaboration between the Cuban and American land and naval forces and aided in the capture of Santiago, an important event in the Spanish-American war.

Another measure approved would authorize the State Department to release 78 medals awarded to United States soldiers by foreign governments.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, predicting Senate approval of his cotton export subsidy idea, charged that opponents of the proposal "are those who want to see cheap cotton in this country."

House Offered Bill to Codify Alien Laws

Dickstein Would Disfranchise Voters In Foreign Elections

Culminating three years' work of the State, Justice and Labor Departments, Chairman Dickstein of the House Immigration Committee yesterday introduced a bill that would codify American nationality legislation for the first time in history and would tighten provisions depriving Americans of their citizenship.

The 92-page bill, revising and unifying the nationality law, was offered on the eve of a showdown in the fight between the Immigration and Judiciary committees over legislation affecting deportation of aliens.

Today Representative Schulte, high-ranking Democrat on the Immigration Committee, will demand a roll-call vote on whether an omnibus bill introduced by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, should be taken out of the hands of the Judiciary Committee and re-referred to the Immigration group.

Dickstein Wants Study

A Judiciary sub-committee already has completed hearings on the Smith bill, which would outlaw advocacy, in speech or writing, of the overthrow of the Government "by unlawful means"; would restrict civilian military organizations; would require registration of aliens and would deport aliens who are criminals, who advocate a change in the form of Government of the United States" or who fail to become American citizens within a limited period.

Opponents of the bill maintain it was submitted to the Judiciary Committee because that group is considered more conservative than the Immigration Committee.

Representative Dickstein said he had no desire to kill the bill, but wanted the House to give his committee authority to investigate and study the whole question of immigration, registration and deportation.

$50,000 Asked

A resolution to this effect, providing also for a study of the illegal entry and smuggling of aliens into the United States, is before the Rules Committee. Representative Schulte, its author, said yesterday he wanted $50,000 voted to carry on the investigation.

The Dickstein bill would take citizenship away from Americans who vote in foreign elections (as some German-Americans did in the Saar plebiscite) or who serve in the armed forces of a foreign state unless expressly authorized by American law.

Hearings on the bill will be held by the immigration committee.

The House will probably take up today a bill, introduced by Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, providing for the detention of deportable aliens whose native countries refuse to admit them. This bill, also claimed by the immigration committee, was referred to the Judiciary Committee, which reported it favorably.

BerleDiscounts Attack on Unity Of Americas

Dangers Too Often Magnified in U. S., Political Scientists Told

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 3.—Propaganda attacks, designed to break up the unity of the Americas, need not be taken too seriously, Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, told the Academy of Political Science today.

"The actual fact is, so far as I can see," Berle said, "neither the Communist nor the Fascist propaganda has made a great deal of headway in South America; the dangers of one or the other are too often magnified in the United States for purposes which are by no means set forth on the surface. . . . They have not had great success, and there is no particular occasion to be unduly frightened about them.

"For our purpose it is enough to know that these movements do exist. . . .

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, associate publisher of The Washington Post, told the gathering that newspaper criticism of Government relief and its failure to solve the unemployment problem has been "too lenient."

"The press has a responsibility to democracy never before equaled," Mrs. Meyer said. "It must represent moral leadership, the conscience of a free democracy at its highest and best. It must recognize that more just social and economic provisions are the prime challenge of the day. On this point, there must be no timid equivocation and no concealment.

"Some members of the present Government have expressed disapproval of the press because of its opposition to various Administration measures, but in its criticism of Government officials for their careless handling of relief and for their failure to deal effectively with the unemployment problem, the press has actually been much too lenient."

Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, retired, said he believed "at least 75 per cent of the efforts of the modern government at war is political and civilian," and suggested the President appoint a deputy president in war time to settle speedily disagreements between "the numerous Federal departments."

Gov. Saltonstall of Masscahusetts urged that the United States "set our own house in order" because, he said, a practical democracy was the "strongest weapon we have for our defense" against dictator nations.

$900,000 More Is Urged For D. C. Relief

LaRoe Says Amount House Voted Would Wreak Hardships

An increase over the $900,000 voted by the House for District relief was asked of the Senate yesterday by Wilbur LaRoe, jr., representing the Washington Federation of Churches.

In a letter to Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, chairman of the appropriations sub-committee in charge of the District budget measure, LaRoe declared a minimum of $1,494,000 was needed to care for the relief situation.

He pointed out that the $900,000 is the same amount as granted for this year and that it has been "generally found to be insufficient."

The maximum limit of $48 a month in relief payments set by the House, he declared, would fall heavily on families receiving aid for dependent children.

"In March of this year," he said in his letter, "there were 477 families with grants above $48 per month. Altogether, 717 cases will be affected by this unfair cut.

"All of us know that $48 a month will not pay rent of $30 or $35 and support a man, wife, and two children. After payments are made for heat, light, and clothing, there is almost nothing left for eating. A larger family would be reduced to the verge of starvation.

"Even under the $60 maximum there has been great hardships in some instances, because a large family cannot live on $60 a month. The sensible thing to do is to leave discretion to those trusted with administration of the funds."

Maj. Gen. Beck Will Command Philippine Division

Maj. Gen. Robert McC. Beck, jr., assistant chief of staff for operations and training since March, 1938, has been appointed commanding general of the Philippine Division, the War Department announced yesterday. He will assume command in September, with headquarters at Fort William McKinley, near Manila.

BECK

Gen. Beck will relieve Maj. Gen. Walter S. Grant, who has been assigned to command of the Philippine Department, succeeding Maj. Gen. John H. Hughes, whose tour of foreign service ends this summer. Gen. Hughes will be assigned upon his return from the Philippines, to duty at headquarters of the Second Corps Area, Governor's Island, N. Y.

GRANT

Gen. Beck was born in Maryland, May 9, 1879, and was graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1901. He holds the Distinguished Service Medal. Gen. Grant, also awarded the D. S. M., was born in New York January 24, 1878, and was graduated from the Military Academy in 1900. Both served in the World War.

Unity Is Urged By Coe to Save Patent System

Commissioner Talks To Round Table of Chamber Delegates

Declaring that wreck of the patent system would mean the ruion of the presetn economic order, Conway P. Coe, Commissioner of Patents, warned yesterday that the system might be "wrecked" unless those familiar with abuses stopped quarreling and agreed on a corrective program.

Coe addressed a round-table conference of United States Chamber of Commerce delegates at the Mayflower Hotel.

After he had gone, however, L. C. Shonts, Chicago patent attorney, rose and declared his statement was one-sided, and his corrective plan, which the Commerce Department recently submitted to the President's monopoly committee, defective.

Coe again recommended the creation of a single court of patent appeals. Shonts said such a court would be a mere "glorified Government bureau — another National Labor Relations Board," and asked:

"Who would be appointed to the court? Lame duck Congressmen?

Coe said the "monopoly" which is a patent needed greater, not less, protection, since a patent now is no guarantee to the poor inventor that his rights will be protected.

The former is of pastel shades of mauve, with a train of lime green and petal pink. The waist is basque fitted to the hip line, with a wide-flared skirt. The lace evening gown is on princess lines with a flared skirt, under which is worn a taffeta rued petticoat, with a wide blue velvet ribbon edging the ruffles. The neck is drawn into a heart shape by two jeweled clips.

250 Pelts in Stole

Accompanying the evening gowns is a white ermine evening stole of 250 selected Alaskan ermine pelts. It is to be worn loosely over the shoulders, and reaches the floor.

For the Washington garden party Mrs. Roosevelt will compliment Queen Elizabeth, who hails from Scotland, by wearing a plaid chiffon, in soft shodes of green, gray, orange and cyclamen, with shirred blouse and sleeves and full skirt.

When she accompanies the President and the royal visitors to the New York Fair on June 10, Mrs. Roosevelt will wear a gown of dark blue crepe, sprinkled with white stars, suggesting the starry field of the United States flag. The gown is of dressmaker design and is trimmed with narrow pipings of navy patent leather. Over the full length coat, with a jacket effect to the hips, made of plain blue crepe, finished with a skirt of the star-pleated silk print. There are both white and Navy hats and accessories for this outfit.

Casual Dress for Day

Another daytime ensemble is of rose crepe with small all-over figures of black and green, with pleated skirt and hip-length jacket. A huge black hat is trimmed with roses the shade of the dress. There also is a dark blue gown with large white figures, made with shirred sleeves and V-neck bodice, for casual daytime wear.

The two casual dinner gowns, for evenings at Hyde Park, where entertaining is simpler than at the White House, have shirtwaist tops and figured skirts.

This new outfit does not include the wool dress, gift of British Empire wool growers, which Mrs. Roosevelt will wear on meeting the royal visitors, and which is to be matched by a similar wool dress worn by the Queen, the gift of American wool growers.

Rubber Substitute Available For War, Businessmen Told

Neoprene, a synthetic rubber developed by E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., could replace rubber to a large extent in case of a shortage caused by war, delegates attending the annual meeting here of the United States Chamber of Commerce were told yesterday.

E. R. Bridgwater, manager of the Wilmington concern's chemicals division, demonstrated the superiority, in some respects, of the synthetic product over natural rubber in a couple of simple laboratory tests before a round table conference at the Mayflower. But with scientific honesty he admitted it was inferior to rubber in certain respects.

Resistant to Heat

A small group of business leaders interested in research watched intently as Bridgwater lit a candle and picked up a strip of rubber and one covered with neoprene. The rubber caught fire when held over the candle, sending up a liberal spurt of smoke and diffusing around the room the odor of burnt rubber. The neoprene-covered strip, however, did not ignite, but merely decomposed slowly when held over the candle. The test revealed the synthetic product's superior resistance to heat.

Bridgwater then took from his pocket a handful of toy balloons, some of rubber and some of neoprene. Putting a rubber balloon to his mouth, he inflated it, tied the end, and poured on the balloon a small quantity of cleansing fluid. The balloon burst. He repeated the process with a neoprene balloon. It remained intact, but burst after he had rubbed the cleansing fluid on it vigorously. The test revealed the synthetic material's superior resistance to oils and similar chemicals.

Age of Synthetics

Eric A. Johnston, Spokane, who presided at the round table discussion, said industry is entering upon "the age of synthetics," a more advanced era in technological progress than the ages of steam and electricity. This age, he said, will reduce dependence on foreign sources for raw materials and increase employment of products never dreamed of before."

Bridgwater said neoprene was made from coal, limestone and salt. The cost still is substantially more than real rubber, he declared, but for certain purposes it is more economical.

D. C. Headquarters Of New Division On Tax Disputes

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury announced yesterday completion of its decentralization of tax reviews by establishing Southern and Atlantic divisions of the technical staff of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The system is designed to enable taxpayers to adjust disputes over Federal taxes with regional offices instead of coming to Washington.

Birmingham was made headquarters of a new Southern division, which includes Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida.

Washington will be headquarters for the Atlantic division comprising Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and the District of Columbia. Branches were designated at Wilmington, Baltimore, Richmond, Huntington, W. Va., and Greensboro, N. C. Paul F.

French Mission Here to Survey U. S. Industries

personnel matters. Present were Admiral William D. Leahy, Rear Admiral J. O. Richardson, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, and Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Committee.

Covers Raw Material

The French official said the survey would cover raw materials and partially finished products as well as actual munitions of war. Labor and raw material costs will be studied to give his government a broad picture of American industrial capacity, it was said. Asked if the plan to place "educational orders" did not contemplate a change in American neutrality laws, which now bar the shipment of munitions to a warring nation, he declared:

"It has nothing to do with your neutrality act. We are seeking raw materials, partially finished metals and machine tools. They are not munitions and may be exported under your present law."

The military attache stressed the matter of machine tools to be used in the manufacture of munitions. American plants making such tools, he stated, coud be of great value to France only in case they were familiar with French Army specifications.

No Help From Government

The mission which consists of Maj. Gen. Andre Gavard, inspector general of ordnance, and Maj. Salmon, a metallurgical expert, will for the most part visit factories not doing work for the American Army, it was said. The group is going direct to private industry without aid from this Government, the French official stated, only consulting the War Department to avoid interference with the department's plans.

Asked if the mission will be shown any secret equipment such as was charged in the Senate at the time the French air mission was here, Lombard declared:

"Oh, no, we have no hope of that. We do not even ask, as we know there is no chance."

The Navy enlistment order, which goes into effect with men enlisting after July 1, will assure greater permanency of personnel aboard ship, and match the practice in foreign navies, officials said. While the rate of re-enlistment is high, those who serve but one term give but a year or two of service, as it requires two to three years to develop a recruit into an efficient man o' wars man, it was said.

Air Bases Studied

By the United Press.

War and Navy Department officials were disclosed last night to be studying plans to establish air and naval bases in Mexico and the Galapagos Islands of Ecuador to fortify Pacific approaches to the Panama Canal.

and related totalitarian policies, he said, "impose a strain too onerous to bear indefinitely."

Charles K. Moser, chief of the Far Eastern section of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Commerce Department, declared it was conceivable that Japan, due to the economic policies of her military regime, might lose a great deal of her foreign trade by sacrificing her "advantageous price position." However, "irritating" the present curtailment of this country's trade with China may be, he said, the country in the long run will be able to carry on its trade with China unhampered, in his opinino.

W. Gibson Carey, jr., New York, president of the Yale & Towne Manufacturing Co., who will be elected president of the chamber today, declared at the luncheon that the Wagner act had caused "unrest," created ill feeling, decreased productivity and displaced thousands of men from private employment.

Business leaders found, at the State and regional dinners, sympathetic hearers in their demand for revision of the Wagner act, removal of tax deterrents to investment for business expansion, and curtailment of Government costs.

The unique series of gatherings, chamber officials felt, had provided a means whereby businessmen were able to get their grievances over to Congress, and thus pave the way for a later overhauling of New Deal laws—perhaps after 1940.

Business leaders were impressed by Burke's demand that determination of employer's rights he left to the Federal courts, instead of to Government agencies, such as the NLRB.

Burke charged that the Labor Board has promoted discord between employers and employes, adding: "Substantial changes in the labor relations policy and a complete overhauling of the agency enforcing this act are one of the three or four most important things that must be done to restore employment to the 12,000,000 now idle."

The exsiting board, he insisted, will have to be "abolished altogether."

Thomas declared that, according to a prominent German official, total governmental expenditures of all kinds in that country in 1938 were between 35 and 40 billion marks, or two-thirds of the national income.

"Countries resorting to such desperate measures to carry out their policies," he said, cannot be lightly regarded as competitors for the trade of Latin America. We must meet this aggression with all the resources at our disposal."

The recent economic agreement negotiated between this country and Brazil, he said, "was of as much benefit to Great Britain as it is was to the United States."

Other speakers opposing Administration policies included B. C. Heacock, Peoria, Ill.; Hugh S. Magill, Chicago, president of the American Federation of Investors, Inc.; John A. Stevenson, Philadelphia, president of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co.; O. J. Arnold, president of the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co.

House Puts Merger No. 1 Into Effect

Offices

American Laborite and 2 Progressives. The 128 who voted to "veto" the mergers were all Republicans.

Only development that could stop effective operation of the transfers would be adjournment of Congress before June 24, and leaders said that is out of the question. The Senate has the power to consider a resolution of disapproval, but such action would be futile, as two-chamber action is necessary. In the House, any attempts to force another vote will be ruled out of order.

Led by Taber, Republicans were quick to accept Warren's invitation to "shell the woods," while Democrats silently looked on, certain of the outcome. Taber jibed at the President's estimate of between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 in economies.

"There will be no economy or efficiency resulting from this transfer," said the New York Republican. "The only thing that will result will be the imposition of a useless overhead on almost all of these agencies. This will cost money. It will not promote efficiency, but will destroy it."

Taber was joined by two other minority members of the House Reorganization Committee, Dirksen, of Illinois, and Gifford, of Massachusetts. Gifford charged Democratic rubber-stamping and Dirksen declared the trend was toward permanent status for temporary agencies.

"The President can arrange the flowers in the vase, but he can't remove a one if it gets droopy," he said.

Representative Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, told Warren and Chairman Cochran of the Reorganization Committee that "if you gentlemen were going to carry out this law, I could have a great deal more faith in the plans than I can under present conditions."

Aside from pointed questioning of Republican speakers, both Warren and Cochran adhered to their strategy of giving minority members full control of the floor, contending the "burden of proof" was on them.

Poison Smeared On Meat Kills Frolicsome Dog

Duchess loved life greatly and so noisily that today she will be buried in Aspen Hill Cemetery by the family that raised her through three robust years.

Duchess was a brown and white collie who lived at the home of Mrs. Walter H. Beal, of 1852 Park road northwest. When Duchess frisked about the yard and barked and yelped that was just her way of telling the world how fine it was to be alive.

Maybe Duchess boasted too much. Certainly she boasted too loudly. Someone remedied that yesterday.

Mrs. Beal returned home from a trip downtown and found her stretched out in the back yard. She was dead and beside her lay a half-eaten meat cake which examination proved to be smeared with strychnine.

Today Mrs. Beal, her two daughters, Miss Ann Beal and Mrs. Elizabeth Devlin, and her two sons, Bill and Henry, will bury the 3-year-old pet. It will be their last, they said.

"We would like to know who did it," Mrs. Beal said through frank tears. "But perhaps it's better we didn't."

Cumberland, Md., May 3.—The plea of George V. Mehalic, 1315 Vernon street, northeast, Washington, D. C., arrested for speeding through LaVale, where there is a 35-mile limit, that he "was hurrying to a funeral," did not save him from a fine of $10 and costs, imposed by Justice Frank A. Perdew in Peoples Court.

THE sensationally low price of $888 is for the same beautiful Packard which formerly sold for $1,000 and up! The Packard 120 and Super-8 have also been reduced as much or more.

Yet not one detail of these cars has been changed, cheapened, or left off.

Go to your nearest Packard dealer today. Take a 1939 Packard out on the road, put it through every test your ingenuity can devise, get all the welcome facts on its economy of upkeep.

Then—even if your heart was set on some other make—see if any power on earth could keep you from owning a Packard. See if you don't decide to get the value, the excellence, the prestige that Packard, and only Packard, can give you.

Roper, Minton Offer Formula For Peace

Harriman, Mrs. Gray Appeal for 'Equal Opportunity for All'

Four leading Americans drew up a formula for peace yesterday in an open-air meeting at Sylvan Theater that closed a nation-wide demonstration of this nation's interest in quieting the world now gripped in the fear of war.

Into a cold, ripping May wind that held the gathering to less than 100, and into a national radio hookup, they propounded these proposals:

Extend to the world the American tradition of equal opportunity for all.

Alter neutrality laws to permit sale of goods, including munitions, on a cash-and-carry basis to all nations save treaty-breakers and aggressors.

Act so the rest of the world may know that Americans are "no longer neutral," but have lined up on the side of justice and international law and are ready "to act now for peace."

Warn "dictators of the world that if they try their tactics in this hemisphere, there will be no appeasement here."

The speakers were Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce and Minister-designate to Canada; Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana; Henry I. Harriman, past president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, vice chairman of the Honorary National Committee for Peace and Security.

"It should be made clear that our boys will never be asked to shoulder arms in any war of aggression, but that we will fight to the finish for our own defense," Roper declared.

"We should stand immovable behind the policy of opposing aggression, of promoting peace among nations and of developing adequate peace machinery," he continued. "To these ends we should mobilize and give voice to our moral support of peace machinery, stressing the importance of working out ways and means of adequately distributing the raw materials . . . for which other portions of the world have great need.

"In this way we would substitute for economic and political chaos a degree of equality of opportunity for all."

Harriman told the gathering that "if the nations of the world desire to check aggression, they must be prepared to right serious wrongs which undoubtedly have been done to the aggressors in the past and they must, through world trade, open the door for the greatest interchange of raw materials and finished goods."

Harriman recommended adoption of the cash-and-carry policy in the United States' international dealings in arms with the proviso against "any nation which has broken a treaty with us or is obviously an aggressor nation."

Americans "have made up their minds," Mrs. Grady said. "They are no longer 'neutral.' The people of the United States have taken sides. They are, as they ever have been, on the side of justice and international law. America is ready to act—and to act now—for peace."

Senator Minton declared that despite the fact the people of Ethiopia, Spain and China did not want war, it came "because they had not the strength to compel consideration for their rights."

He declared that "America is devoted to peace, but no less than she is devoted to the high idealism that has lifted her up." Then he concluded:

"We want to be left alone, and to leave others alone, but we want above all things, to make it abundantly clear to the dictators of the world that if they try their tactics in this hemisphere, there will be no appeasement here."

The observance was sponsored by the Honorary National Committee for Peace and Security Week of which Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator, was chairman.

Roper presided at the meeting as chairman of the District of Columbia committee. He was introduced by Clark M. Eichelberger, New York, chairman of the American Union for Concerted Peace Efforts.

Neutrality Called "Cowardly"

Neutrality for the United States was attacked as "cowardly" and "futile" by Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, and Edwin S. Smith, of the National Labor Relations Board, at a meeting sponsored by the American League for Peace and Democracy last night.

Speeking at Friendship House, 619 O street southeast, Keller declared that "if we are so cowardly as not to defend ourselves" America will be victimized by aggressor nations.

Keller urged support of European nations "to wipe dictatorial nations off the map" and asked a strong Navy, Army, and foreign policy to "be prepared to meet tyrant countries."

Smith urged the "abandonment of neutrality in behalf of the victims of aggressor nations" and to halt "Germany's inevitable drive toward war."

Patrolman Roy Palmer said the men gave their names as Orville Watson, 29, and Edward Riley, 37. Watson had been wounded. One of the men wanted for the Chicago shooting had been operated upon for the removal of a bullet wound while a physician was covered by a gun.

The woman, Palmer said, gave her name as Susana Smith, 22.

Tax

stead of 1942, and liberalize benefits generally along lines recommended by the Social Secudity Board.

Expand the present general exemption of agricultural labor to include students, and to exempt employes of all nonprofit organizations receiving only nominal pay.

Provide for 50-50 "matching" contributions by the Federal Government to the States for aid to dependent children, in lieu of present provision for only 33 1-3 per cent Federal grants.

Forecasts that the Ways and Means group will move next to consideration of readjustments in the corporate tax structure in aid of business meanwhile were made in a radio address by Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, an influential committee member.

"Chairman Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, has announced that next week Treasury officials will be invited to submit recommendations for a general tax revision program," McCormack said in a joint radio discussion with Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York.

Calling committee changes in the social security act a "good start," McCormack said business would be further aided by "repeal or alleviation" of other "oppressive" taxes by adjustment of the levies so as not to rdeuce total revenue. He called on businessmen and other listeners to make their views known if they expect Congress to act.

Specifically, McCormack called for drastic modification of the capital gains tax, reduction of income surtaxes to a maximum of 25 per cent, complete repeal of the undivided profits tax, substitution of a single tax for the present corporate income, capital stock and excess profits tax, right to carry over net corporate losses for at least two years, repeal of the inter-corporate dividend tax, repeal of the individual normal income tax on corporate dividends, and the right for affiliated corporations to file cnosolidated returns.

Under yesterday's proposed modification of unemployment compensation tax provisions, States which have built up adequate reserves could reduce the rate of contribution required of employers below 2.7 per cent, and still permit employers to obtain their full 90 per cent credit on the Federal pay roll tax.

Employers now are assessed a 3 per cent Federal pay roll tax, but if they also pay a State unemployment tax they are given a credit of 90 per cent of the Federal levy or a 2.7 per cent tax offset. As all States have a contribution rate of 2.7 per cent or higher, the Federal Government actually collects only three-tenths of 1 per cent of pay roll tax from employers.

"If the committee's recommendation is enacted into law, a State would be enabled to reduce its contribution rate below 2.7 per cent, and employers in that State would still be able to claim the full 2.7 per cent offset against the 3 per cent Federal tax, provided the State had built up the requisite unemployment compensation reserve fund and had a law grantin benefits meeting certain minimum standards," Doughton explained.

1% Cut Possible

Under the recommendation, said Doughton, a State might make a general reduction in the rate of contribution from 2.7 per cent to 1.7 per cent and some individual employers might pay even less if their employment record was favorable. In States still having insufficient reserve, it would be necessary to continue to maintain an average contribution rate of 2.7 per cent.

Doughton said the committee probably will define as "adequate reserve" a fund not less than one and one-half times the highest annual total of contributions paid into the reserve, or one-and-one-half times the highest annual total of benefits paid out of the fund, whichever is greater.

He said the committee also probably will recommend, as a minimum benefit standard, that unemployment payments be made to qualified persons for a period of 16 weeks, (up to one-half the individual's yearly earnings), at a rate of not less than 50 per cent of the full weekly earnings, after a waiting period of not more than two weeks.

He declared the proposed formula for easing the unemployment payroll tax burden would permit States having good employment records "to take appropriate action without having an adverse effect on the operation of the unemployment compensation systems in States with unfavorable employment experience."

Sister Accuses Man In Fatal Shooting

Martinsville, May 3 (AP).—Jim Wiles, 39, was ordered held for the Henry County grand jury under $2,500 bond following a hearing in trial justice court here today on charges of fatally wounding his brother-in-law, Dewey Hodgeson, 24, in the southern part of the county last Saturday night.

Mrs. Hodgeson testified that Wiles had shot her husband after threatening to "kill the whole Hodgeson family." Wiles said he did not remember the details of the shooting because he had been drinking at the time.

City Treasurer Roger C. Sullivan has announced that the deadline for the payment of poll taxes to be qualified to vote in the August primary and the November general election is Saturday, May 6. According to State law the capitation tax must be paid at least six months prior to the general election.

New residents in the city who have been in the State for one year must pay only one year's taxes, those living in Virginia for two years must pay for the two years, while residents for a longer period will be required to pay three year's taxes. Young people just becoming of age are permitted to be assessed for this year and are entitled to register and vote.

The city treasurer said that from present indications the voting lists for 1939 will be the largest in the history of the city.

Elections to be held this year are for State senator, State representatives to the House of Delegates and members of the City Democratic Committee.

Babies Born Here Have Better Odds To Live Than Most

Dr. Melvin P. Isaminger, director of public health instruction, yesterday said infants born in the District had a better chance to survive than in the nation as a whole.

He cited statistics placing the infant mortality rate for the District at 48 deaths per 1,000 live births as compared with 51 for the nation during 1938.

In 1915, out of every 1,000 babies born alive in the District, 111 died during the first year. In the United States registration area the rate was 100 at that time.

Japan Demands Stronger Voice in Shanghai

Attacks U. S. Growing Seapower as Threat To Her China Policy

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, May 3.—The Japanese government today criticized American naval expansion plans and presented demands to the United States and Britain for a larger share in control of the International Settlement at Shanghai.

It was disclosed that the navy ministry had prepared an official pamphlet which declares that the United States "has moved definitely toward invasion of the Pacific" and sees a threat to Japan's China policy in America's growing sea power.

Demands that the Shanghai Municipal Council, which governs the International Settlement, be reorganized to give Japanese a larger voice in its affairs and permit stronger measures against "terrorism" were presented to the American and British ambassadors here.

Japan declared that the Japanese community in Shanghai failed to receive "due and fair expression in the administration of the Settlement." Japan now has two members of the council, Britain five and the United States two.

Renzo Sawada, vice minister of foreign affairs, told Ambassador Joseph C. Grew and Sir Robert Leslie Craigie the Japanese government could not overlook the activities of anti-Japanese elements in Shanghai or the activities of enemies of the new, Japanese sponsored Chinese regimes.

Beck to Ask Guarantee for Danzig Poles

He Will Deny Hitler's Statement on Offer Of Pact, Is Report

By International News Service.

Paris, May 3.—Polish Foreign Minister Beck, in his eagerly-awaited speech Friday, intends to ask Reichsfuehrer Hitler to guarantee the safety of Polish residents and munitions stores in the Free City of Danzig, it was learned in Paris tonight.

This was contained in an outline of Beck's forthcoming statement conveyed to French Foreign Minister Bonnet by Polish Ambassador Lukasiewicz.

Points of Speech

ccording to the best available information the speech, as outlined by LuAkasiewicz, will contain the following salient points:

Reiteration of Poland's intention to respect her obligations to Britain and France.

statement of Poland's version of the Danzig negotiations, entailing denial that Hitler had offered a 25-year non-aggression agreement and a German-Polish-Hungarian guarantee to Slovakia.

A declaration of Paland's position with regard to Danzig which is expected to be moderately phrased and will probably set forth no specific Polish counter-claims but may explain without details that Poland wants guaranteed proction of her citizens and the munition's stocks she maintains in the Free City under authority of the League of Nations as part of Polish Baltic defense.

Insistence that any alteration in the status of Danzig can be peacefully effected through negotiations, but refusal to cede any territory in Danzig or the corridor or to wield any Palish rights.

Seek British Support

Warsaw, May 3.—The Polish government sought British support tonight in the battle of words with Nazis over control of the Free City of Danzig and Pomorze (Polish corridor,) Poland's commercial lifeline to the Baltic.

Foreign Minister Beck, his speech completed for Friday's session of the Sejm (parliament), conferred with the British ambassador, Sir Howard William Kennard, on the contents of this new reply to German demands.

Semi-official sources said Beck's address was not expected to close the door on the possibility of further German-Polish negotiations, but that its tone would be "very firm."

Newspapers called editorially for the cession of East Prussia to Poland as a "real solution" of the Polish-German problem.

Beck's speech, a reply to Hitler's denunciation Friday of the 1934 Polish-German nonaggression treaty and an analysis of German demands for Danzig and the German trans-corridor road, was expected to start Friday between 11:15 and 11:30 a. m. (5:15 and 5:30 a. m. E. S. T.). It will be broadcast on United States chains.

900 Families Off Relief Threaten Raid for Food

Flint, Mich., May 3 (U.P.).—Men representing 900 families dropped from city relief rolls took up a "death watch" in a tent across the street from the county relief offices tonight and announced they would lead an attack on Flint food warehouses unless their demands were met.

Ed Weber, spokesman for the picket committee, said:

"I will personally lead the 900 families just refused relief and the 500 men purged from WPA and the 4,000 to 5,000 WPA workers of Flint on a raid of every food warehouse in the city if officials refuse to consider this problem."

Heads of 900 families, totaling approximately 3,000 persons, were cut off direct relief May 1 because of a $50,000 drop in funds, according to E. J. Sausen, emergency relief administrator.

Offered German Peace Pacts

Rumanians Offer Debt Settlement

Payment Over Period Of Years Provided in Plan Handed to Hull

By the Associated Press.

Rumania offered to settle her $84,000,000 war debt to the United States yesterday on terms which, it was learned, called for scaling down of the total obligation.

The details of the offer, submitted to Secretary Hull by Rumanian Minister Radu Irimescu, were not announced. Persons in authority said, however, that in addition to a reduction the offer provided for paying off over a period of years.

Hungary offered last year to make a debt settlement. Her offer was to pay, in about 30 yearly installments, the total of the sum borrowed, less amounts paid on principal and interest, and minus any further interest.

If Rumania followed the same formula, her payments would be reduced to about $33,000,000. She borrowed $37,911,152 for war and relief purposes, of which she has paid $4,791,007.

The offer was transmitted last night to President Roosevelt and the Treasury. After study, it will be submitted by the President to Congress with comments, an authority said.

If Congress accepts Rumania's offer and payments begin, Rumania will be exempted from the provisions of the Johnson act under which governmenst defaulting on their debts to the United States are prevented from floating any further loans in this country until the default is overcome.

Georgia Society Dance Saturday

The Georgia State Society will hold its last dance of the season Saturday evening at the Shoreham Hotel, it was announced yesterday. Arrangements are being made by Miss Queenie Baker, Mrs. Edmond Worthy, Mrs. Tom Camp, Mrs. Lacy Hinely, Lawrence Thurston and Clark Cole.

Harry L. Brown, president, will have on the receiving committee: Mrs. Brown, Judge Annabelle Matthews, Mrs. Ronald Ransom, Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Kahrs, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Faircloth, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Roy North, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Geesling, Miss Julia Reynolds, J. W. Cole and Marcus Rolls.

Drastic Racial Laws Adopted By Hungary

300,000 May Be Cut Off From Means Of Making Living

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, May 3.—Drastic anti-Jewish laws which may cut off 300,000 Jews from their means of livelihood and compel them to seek new homes abroad within five years were adopted by the Hungarian parliament today without dissent.

[Following the vote Admiral Horthy, Regent, dissolved Parliament and ordered secret elections held the latter part of this month to test the strength of the government party, the United Press reported.—Editor's note.]

The measures limit Jewish participation in business and the professions roughly to 6 to 12 per cent of the total number of persons engaged in the various callings and line up Hungary with Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy in the "control" of Jews.

The adoption of the laws came only a few hours after the return of Premier Teleky and his foreign minister, Count Csaky, from talks with Chancellor Hitler and other Nazi officials in Berlin.

Shortly after the parilament action, Dr. Dezso Kenedy, one of Budapest's most prominent Jewish physicians, killed himself.

For a five-year period the law stipulates that Jews will be dismissed from professions and business in groups every three months, with all ejected by the spring of 1944.

No Jew is to be allowed in public or government service. Jews may hold no leading position in journalism, theaters or the cinema. The state may appropriate, with compensation, farm land in excess of a half-acre owned by Jews.

Jews may vote only for a list of Jewish candidates. Jewish members of Parliament may not exceed more than 6 per cent of the whole membership.

Jewish leaders expressed fear emigration would be difficult because the exodus of Jews from Germany, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Italy has already crowded available havens in other countries.

here that Hungary, once considered a friend of Poland, would stick to Germany.

Foreign ministers of Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland discussed Hitler's proposals by telephone today and arranged to meet in Stockholm May 9 to consider whether their traditional neutral positions would be endangered by acceptance.

Hitler's approach to Finland, it was reported, involves his approval for fortification of the strategic Aaland Islands, provided they, too, are "neutralized."

Should Estonia and Latvia agree to Hitler's proposal, it would mean that Poland would be surrounded by nations neutralized on Germany's initiative on all frontiers excepting that with Soviet Russia.

A nonaggression accord already exists between Germany and Lithuania.

Legislator Truculent

(In Oslo the President of the Norwegian Storting—Legislature—told that body that the government had made the wrong answer to Hitler's query prior to his Reichstag speech Friday on whether Norway considered herself threatened. Instead of replying that Norway did not regard herself as menaced, he said the government should have answered that after what had occurred in Europe everyone felt threatened by Germany.)

Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop decided not to wait for Beck's reply on Friday before talking over the new diplomatic offensive with Germany's axis partner, Italy. He will confer with Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano near Lake Como at about the time Beck's answer is expected in Berlin.

Yugoslavia Courted

Berlin, May 3 (INS).—Germany will open economic negotiations with Yugoslavia at Cologne May 20. Foreign reports that the Reich has undertaken to supply a $120,000,000 loan for Yugoslavian rearmament were denied, but it was apparent that strenuous Italo-German efforts are being continued to reconcile Yugoslavia with Hungary and bring it firmly into the Rome-Berlin orbit.

Success of these efforts, which are expected to form a major topic of the Ribbentrop-Ciano talks, would mean a strategic situation tantamount to the virtual encirclement by the axis of Rumania.

This in turn would confront the western boundaries of both Poland and Russia with an almost solid line of potentially hostile or "neutral" states. Conditions would then be ripe for Germany to press its demands on Poland.

Ches. & Ohio Expects To Regain Coal Trade

Cleveland, May 3 (AP).—President George D. Brooke estimated at Nickel Plate Railroad's annual meeting today the parent Chesapeake & Ohio line would regain practically all the coal tonnage it is losing because of suspension of operations in the bituminous fields.

Chesapeake & Ohio's loadings have been halved since suspension of mine operations during contract negotiations between CIO union miners and mine operators.

Churchill Says Poles Need Soviet Aid to Halt Hitler

Envisages Baltic-Black Sea Front To Prevent Nazi 'Outrage', Declares British Aroused by German 'Treachery'

By Winston Churchill.

By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post.

London, May 3.—It seems only too probable that the glare of Nazi Germany is now to be turned on Poland.

Hitler's speeches may or may not be a guide to his intentions, but the salient object of the recent Reichstag performance was obviously to isolate Poland, to make the most plausible case against her, and to bring intensive pressure upon her.

The German dictator seemed to suppose that he could make the British-Poland agreement inoperative by focusing his demands upon Danzig and the Corridor. He does not seem to be conscious of the immense change which has been wrought in British public opinion by his treacherous breach of the Munich agreement and the complete reversal of policy which this outrage brought about in the British government and especially in the prime minister.

The denunciation of the German-Polish nonaggression pact of 1934 is an extremely serious and menacing step. Like the British-German naval treaty it was negotiated at the wish of Hitler, and gave marked advantages to Germany.

The German-Polish agreement enabled Nazi attention to be concentrated first upon Austria and later upon Czecho-Slovakia. It temporarily weakened the relations between France and Poland, and prevented any solidarity of interests growing up among the states of eastern Europe. Now that it has served its purpose for Germany, it is cast away by one-sided action and Poland is implicitly informed that she is now in the zone of potential aggression.

This Nazi habit of illegally and faithlessly abolishing treaties without the assent of the other party, after having reaped all possible advantages from them, has rarely taken a more brazen form. Hitler and Nazi Germany have virtually destroyed their power of making agreements of any kind to which validity can be attached. This melancholy realization will long brood over European affairs. There is, of course, no need for Great Britain and France to be more Polish than the Poles.

If Poland feels able to make adjustments in the Corridor and at Danzig which are satisfactory to both sides, no one will be more pleased than her western allies, but there will be no disposition on their part to press Poland to make concessions damaging to her interests or security.

There is every reason to believe that the Polish nation intends to fight for life and freedom. They have a fine, brave army of which now more than 1,000,000 men are mobilized. The Poles have always fought well, and an army which comprehends its cause is doubly strong.

But it must be vividly impressed upon the government of Poland that the accession of Soviet Russia in real earnest to the peace bloc of nations may be decisive in preventing war and will in any case be necessary for ultimate success. One understands readily the Polish policy of balancing between the German and the Russian neighbor, but from the moment when the Nazi malignity is plain a definite association between Poland and Soviet Russia becomes indispensable.

Peace may yet be saved by the assembly of superior forces against aggression.

Not only must the full co-operation of Soviet Russia be accepted but the three Baltic states, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, must also be associated. To these three countries possessing together armies totaling at least 20 divisions of virile troops, a friendly Soviet Russia, supplying munitions and other aid, is essential. There is no means of maintaining an eastern front against Nazi aggression without the active aid of Soviet Russia. Russian interests are deeply concerned in preventing Hitler's designs in eastern Europe.

It should still be possible to range all the states and people from the Baltic to the Black Sea in one solid front against a new outrage of invasion. Such a front, if established in good heart and with resolute and efficient military arrangements combined with the force of western powers, may yet confront Hitler, Goering, Himmler, Von Ribbentrop, Goebbels and company with forces the German people would be reluctant to challenge.

Litvinoff Out, Molotoff Will Take His Post

Litvinoff

power agreement to aid Poland in case of German attack. Molotoff is understood by Polish circles to favor an alliance.)

The Soviet foreign office made no comment, however.

(Prior to word of Litvinoff's retirement, it had been believed in London that he would meet with the British and French foreign ministers in Geneva May 15 to discuss British-French efforts to bring Soviet Russia into an alliance for guaranteeing the independence of Poland and Rumania.)

Litvinoff's policy through the years was, first, a constant striving against the dangers of anti-Bolshevik encirclement and, later, to establish clearly Soviet Russia's right to a voice in world affairs.

For many years it was difficult to obtain even diplomatic recognition from capitalist countries. The United States did not recognize Russia until 1933 and Yugoslavia still is holding out.

By 1921, the beginning of Litvinoff's career in the foreign commissariat, the cordon sanitaire which capitalist powers attempted to erect around the Bolshevist state after the revolution had been broken down.

Made Pact With Reich

In 1922 Litvinoff made the other major European powers sit up and take notice when at Rapallo he concluded an agreement with Germany—which then was second in international unpopularity only to Red Russia herself.

He wa sat first an outspoken critic of the League of Nations, but in 1927 he represented the Soviet Union at a preliminary disarmament conference.

In 1928 he offered to sign the Kellogg Pact, outlawing war as an instrument of national policy, even though the Soviet Union was not yet recognized in Washington.

Used League as Lever

Litvinoff led Russia into the League of Nations in 1934 and thereafter used the League as a lever to work for his policy of collective resistance against aggressors. He was particularly active during the League's attempt in 1935 to deal with Premier Mussolini's conquest of Ethiopia and also with Reichsfuerhrer Hitler's remilitarization of the Rhineland.

His efforts to bring the western democratic powers into a collective front to resist Fascist aggression suffered a severe setback last September. Then Prime Minister Chamberlain, Premier Daladier, Hitler and Musolini met at Munich and settled the fate of Czecho-Slovakia without Soviet Russian participation.

Litvinoff, now 62, at first was assistant commissar of foreign affairs, then acting commissar and finally in 1930 was made commissar.

Snubbed for Many Years

He was one of the most prominent figures at Geneva during the recent and most difficult years of the League of Nations.

For many years Litvinoff's contact with European diplomats was a long series of snubs. But eventually he won recognition as one of the outstanding figures in international relations.

In London in 1918 he entered the Russian diplomatic service abruptly by producing a cable from Leon Trotsky announcing his appointment as "Ambassador of the Russian people."

When Bruce Lockhart, British diplomatic agent, was arrested in Moscow after the revolution, Litvinoff was held in London as a hostage and later deported.

On his return to Moscow, Litvinoff specialized in western European affairs.

Married a Briton

Of Jewish otraction, he married a British woman, Ivy Low, daughter of Sir Sydney Low, while he was living in London. They have two children.

His successor, Molotoff, already occupies a position equivalent to Premier of the Soviet Union. He is regarded popularly as Joseph Stalin's righthand man. He is 49 and was twice imprisoned and exiled during the old Czarist regime.

Litvinoff went to Washington November 7, 1933, and conferred with President Roosevelt ten days before the United States recognized Soviet Russio.

Litvinoff's Leaving Puzzles Capital Diplomatic Circles

Personal Feud With Stalin Hinted; His Talk With Roosevelt Here Led to U. S. Recognition of Soviet

By Edward T. Folliard

Like other world capitals, Washington yesterday wondered and speculated over the "release" of Maxim Maximovich Litvinoff, Russia's brilliant commissar for foreign affairs.

A story current in diplomatic circles was that Stalin had long disliked Litvinoff, not so much for political as for personal reasons. Rumors that Litvinoff was on the way out were circulated in Moscow as far back as 1935, according to one authority, who said that he was retained in his post only because of his fame abroad and his skill as a diplomat.

The Paris newspaper Le Jour printed a story on August 5, 1937, saying that Litvinoff was on Stalin's "purge" list.

Not Surprised at News

The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, of Georgetown University, who headed the papal relief mission to Russia in 1922 and who has since been a close student of Russian affairs, said he was not surprised at the news of Litvinoff's fall.

"It appears to be a continuation of Stalin's purge in all directions," Father Walsh said. "Control of foreign affairs—as well as of the entire destiny of Russia—is now so concentrated in the hands of Stalin that scarcely anybody remains from the old Balshevik, or Lenin, group except Kalinin, titular president of the Soviet Union."

Kalinin, a bearded, rustic type, who taught himself to read and write, is well liked in the Moscow inner circle, because of his influence with the Russian peasants.

Molotoff Close to Stalin

Molotoff, premier of the U. S. S. R., who now takes over Litvinoff's job of handling foreign affairs, wears a pince-nez and well-made clothes. He has been described as a "strutter," never popular with the old Bolsheviks, but "very close" to Stalin.

The fundamental explanation behind Stalin's frightful purge, which already has cost some 1,400 Russians their lives, is that he has got far away from Lenin's Communism. This has brought criticism, and the criticism, or suspected critcism, has in turn brought death.

Litvinoff, who did more for his country abroad than any other member of the Bolshevik regime, occupied a particularly delicate position. On the one hand he had to maintain cordial relations with the envoys of foreign powers, and on the other he had to convince the Kremlin that he was a good Stalinist.

Called on Carpet

He and his wife—tthe former Ivy Low, daughter of Sir Sydney Low, a London publisher—at one time mixed in a lot with a Moscow set that included the American newspaper correspondents. Litvinoff was called on the carpet and warned about such seeming heresy.

A roly-poly man of 62, with light reddish hair, heavy features and a florid face, Litvinoff came to Washington on November 7, 1933. He talked with President Roosevelt the next day, and they promptly announced that they had reached an understanding. Formal recognition of Russia was announced November 17. Litvinoff guaranteed that the Soviet Embassy would refrain from propaganda against the existing order in the United States and that it would restrain any agency under the direct or indirect control of the U. S. R. R from interfering in American internal affairs.

Litvinoff recently was elected to the Jewish "Hall of Fame." He was born in Poland, but there is some confusion as to his real name. Some accounts give it as Finkelstein, and others as Vallach or Wallach. Litvinoff is said to have been the name of a dear friend, a pioneer Communist, who died in Paris many years before the Russian revolution.

Dictator Stalin has been represented in a recent magazine article as being determined to reach an understanding with Nazi Germany. Could this, it was asked yesterday, be one reason for dumping Litvinoff?

Romance Invades Death Valley; Scotty Aids Cupid

Death Valley, Calif., May 3 (AP).—Music and romance were in the air at Death Valley today. Scotty gave a wedding party at the Castle.

"They think they're on Mount Olympus or Mars Hill," the mystery desert prospector said. He stood up with the bridegroom. His "pardner," A. M. Johnson, gave the bride away.

Romantic and colorful was the ceremony. It united Joseph Choate and Dorothy Drew. Choate traces his family to his namesake, illustrious New York diplomat and orator of generations ago. The bride claims kinship to William Cullen Bryant and Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Giannini Interests Forbidden to Hire Ex-SEC Lawyer

San Francisco, May 3 (U.P.).—Federal Judge A. F. St. Sure today issued a temporary injunction restraining the employment of William J. Mahaney, former Securities and Exchange Commission attorney, by the Bank of America, the Timetrust, Inc., the Transamerica Corporation, of L. M. Giannini, president of Bank of America.

The injunction was sought by the SEC as one phase of its series of court actions against Giannini financial interests.

The ruling, in effect, held that Mahaney would not be able to pass to any of the defendants information he may have obtained while working for the SEC.

Britain Said To Be Seeking U. S. Peace Plea

Parley

Moscow that Foreign Commissar Litvinoff had "resigned."

It already had been stated semi-officially in London that Litvinoff would meet with British Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and French Foreign Minister Bonnet at Geneva May 15, when the League of Nations' council is scheduled to convene.

It was assumed that either the new foreign commissar, Molotoff, or Vice Commissar Vladimir Potemkin, now in Ankara negotiating with Turkey, would go to Geneva instead of Litvinoff.

Unless the projected Anglo-French-Soviet entente is consummated or abandoned before that date, the foreign ministers or their representatives will probably discuss the matter at Geneva.

The highest British government source tonight said that the "Litvinoff sensation" may deeply affect the whole European situation.

Political circles in London speculated whether the ousting of Litvinoff—regarded as a long-time friend of Britain—resulted from Joseph Stalin's disapproval of the diplomat's policy, as well as his tactics.

Stalin an Isolationist?

It was recalled that Hitler in his speech last Friday refrained from his customary attacks on "the Bolshevist menace," possibly in the hope of indirectly dissuading the Soviet Union from alliance with the Western democratic powers.

Although responsible British government quarters saw nothing internationally "sinister" behind the foreign commissariat alteration, there was a revival in unofficial circles of the old and never-confirmed rumors concerning the possibilities that emissaries of Hitler and Stalin are secretly holding conferences seeking a Soviet-German rapprochment.

The British gavernment spokesman said Stalin is known to have opposed any wide or deep Russian entanglements in the other sections of Europe. Stalin, he added, was reluctant about letting Russia be used for what he conceived to be the purpose of saving the British empire.

Alliance Opposed

The British government still opposes the Soviet proposal for an outright Anglo-French-Soviet alliance. London's reply is expected to urge the Soviets to be content to offer assistance to a victim of aggression along with Britain and France.

Under this plan, the form and extent of Soviet aid would be determined at the time of aggression and would be in line with that acceptable to the state which had been attacked. Apparently, the British government, together with the French government, is now prepared to give a blanket guaranty to the states of Central and Eastern Europe as a means of meeting the Soviet contention that the specific guaranties thus far given constitute a "piece-meal" policy.

Italy Reported Seeking Way To Ease Reich, Polish Tension

South American Nation Willing To Act as Mediator Believed Sought; Ciano, Von Ribbentrop to Confer

Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, May 3.—Concurrently with the announcement that German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop will meet his Italian colleague, Count Ciano, at Lake Como over the week-end, persistent reports circulated in Rome today that Italy was anxious to find some way of mediating between Germany and Poland.

Most of these reports dwelt on the possibility of finding some South American nation willing to lend its good offices to composing the ever-increasing tension between the Reich and Poland.

Most North American, European and Asiatic nations are ruled out by suspicions that their sympathies are already too actively engaged in the latent conflict between the axis and the "encirclement" powers.

The Italian position is particularly delicate, as Count Ciano recently spent a week in Poland and relations between the two countries have been on a very cordial basis, but not so close that difficulty between Germany and Poland would cause any rift in the axis.

It may well be that Von Ribbentrop's visit to Italy and meeting with Ciano was motivated by a desire to allay reports which have recently been current about Italy's reluctance to be involved in an international dispute based on the Polish Corridor.

Participation in such a quarrel would certainly not be received enthusiastically by the Italian public, but it would be injudicious to assume that if Germany became involved in a general struggle on that account, Italy would not be at her side. There are no grounds for such an assumption. The coming meeting between Von Ribbentrop and Ciano might well be designed to emphasize this fact.

Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, chief of the German army general staff, who came to Italy last Saturday, is now in Libya, traveling toward the eastern frontier which borders on Egypt. Marshal Goering, in his recent visit, devoted himself to the western frontier, bordering on Tunisia.

Schneider Notes Reported Written Before Hearing

Kansas City, May 3 (AP).—An associate of Edward L. Schneider, missing Tom Pendergast business aide, said today two suicide notes apparently were penned the day before the Federal grand jury heard his testimony and promptly reindicted the Democratic boss in income tax evasion charges.

The notes were found Monday in Schneider's automobile, parked on a Missouri River bridge. Government officers expressed doubt he jumped in the river, and have made a widespread search for him.

Carl Braun, office manager of the Ready Mixed Concrete Co., of which Prendergast is president and Schneider secretary-treasurer, said he saw Schneider writing what he now believes to be one of the notes last Thursday.

Greed for $100 Reward Solves Shootings Here

Gang Leader Turns In Accomplices Who Then Implicate Him

Greed for $100 reward money offered by Maj. Ernest W. Brown for solution of the mysterious shootings of a Chinese laundryman and a cab driver brought about the arrest of two colored youths and the subsequent arrest of their alleged leader who turned them in for the reward, it was revealed yesterday.

Capt. Jeremiah Sullivan led a squad of detectives to a house in the 600 block N street northwest, Tuesday night, on information furnished by a 43-year-old colored man. Two youths were captured and they confessed the shootings, implicating the police informer as the "brains" behind their maraudings.

The youths, 17 and 23, were identified by Malcolm Crockett, 32, cab driver who is critically wounded at Casualty Hospital. They later confessed they also shot Lew Tew, 62, who is close to death at Sibley Hospital.

After their arrest, the youths told police, according to Captain Sullivan, that they were "put up to it" by the older man and that they had staged two holdups earlier in the week under his direction. His arrest came immediately after the suspects gave police his identification.

The older suspect vigorously denied any connection with the shootings.

Tew was shot Saturday night while searching for the keys to the cash drawer in his laundry and a few minutes later, Crockett was shot in the mouth by two passengers. They made no attempt to rob him, he said.

Montgomery Builder Found Dead in Car, Garage Closed

Body Is Discovered at New Construction In Silver Spring

OWEN E. RYAN

Owen E. Ryan, 44, builder and real estate man in Montgomery County, Md., was found dead yesterday in the front seat of his car in the closed garage of a new house at 806 Montgomery avenue, Silver Spring.

Dr. H. H. Howlett, who pronounced him dead, said the garage doors were tightly closed and the car's ignition was on. The gas tank, however, was empty and the motor had stopped. Ryan had been dead about nine hours, Dr. Howlett said.

The body was discovered by Ignatius Dorsey, a colored workman, who summoned police. Authorities attributed death to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Ryan, who leaves a wife and two children, lived at 110 Shepherd street, Chevy Chase, Md. He was a member of the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce.

A veteran of the World War, Ryan was a leader in State and county American Legion activities and a member of the Montgomery County Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Last September he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Maryland House of Delegates on the independent ticket.

Litvinoff Out

The resignation of Maxim Litvinoff, for ten years Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, throws the European picture into deeper confusion.

Litvinoff rose to fame as perhaps the strongest champion in Europe of that policy of collective security which was embodied in the Covenant of the League of Nations. It was during his tenure of office that Russia joined the League which, in the past, the Bolsheviks had denounced in unmeasured terms as a conspiracy of capitalist nations.

With the rise of Hitler in Europe, and the continued expansion of Japan in Asia, Russia made an about-face in her foreign relations. Moscow soft-pedaled the activities of the Third International, restrained the advocates of world revolution and sought agreements with western powers for preservation of the status quo. The treaties of alliance with France and, later, with Czecho-Slovakia were important manifestations of the new trend which received a severe and almost fatal blow at Munich. Then Russia was left out in the cold, Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy taking it upon themselves to sanction an important change in the map of Europe.

Despite this extremely severe rebuff to his policy, Litvinoff was allowed to stay on. After the German seizure of Bohemia and Moravia he had a new chance to salvage his policy of collective security and he found elements both in Great Britain and France sympathetic with his aims. Russia was summoned back to participate in the counsels of Europe as a potentially important member of the anti-aggression bloc. But the negotiations undertaken between Moscow and London in March have not yet reached fruition. It is not at all impossible that it was never Stalin's desire to have them succeed.

Whether the fall of Litvinoff means that the Soviet dictator is preparing a new about-face in Russian policy and even, as some have predicted, to make a deal with Hitler, is not certain. But the possibility cannot be left out of the calculations of any European statesman. Should Nazi and Communist dictatorships join hands, or even should Russia now decide to adopt an isolationist policy, the British efforts to create a new barrier in the path of Hitler's push to the east would face enormously increased difficulties.

Our Greatest Problem

Latest estimates of the A. F. of L. and the National Industrial Conference Board place the number of unemployed at 11,200,000 and 10,750,000, respectively, including 2,800,000 persons employed by the WPA.

This is a formidable figure, indicating very clearly that so far we have failed to discover any constructive solution for the most serious problem that confronts the Nation today. It is true that the volume of unemployment is much less than it was six years ago, when the country was in the depths of depression. But it is also true that we are not making any measurable progress in reducing the number of unemployed.

It is apt to be forgotten that every year about half a million or more of young people finish their schooling and join the army of work seekers. The increase sharply exceeds the numbers withdrawn by death or voluntary retirement. In addition to which it is estimated that the numbers employed in March, 1939, were 4,250,000 below the peak figure of 1929.

Thus it is apparent that a solution of the problem of unemployment calls for an expansion of industry far beyond anything we have achieved or seem likely to achieve for some time to come. Significantly, Louis Stark points out in a recent article in the New York Times, the increase in employment recorded during March as compared with a year ago no more than accounts for the "normal annual increase in the Nation's working forces."

The reasons for our inability to go forward are fairly well understood. It is not due to industrial stagnation, but to the ability to produce more with less labor. Thus, our problem is essentially that of effecting economic adjustments that would provide more varied kinds of occupations ministering to new needs. And there is also the problem of finding ways of permanently raising purchasing power to enable people to satisfy more fully the needs of everyday existence.

Willingness to take risks and the imagination to conceive of the opportunities for profit in new fields of production are essential to create jobs for a growing population. Government spending has not and will not provide the stimulus required. At most, it affords a refuge for a certain proportion of the unemployed for whom there is no place in private industry. Until we address ourselves resolutely to the task of removing the existing obstacles to a major expansion of private industry along new paths, we shall make no headway toward a solution of our greatest social and economic problem—unemployment.

Our Bookless Millions

Just a century ago Horace Mann, then secretary of the newly-created Massachusetts Board of Education, presented to that body his famous "Report for 1839," in which he urged "some plan by which a school library shall be placed in every district school in the State."

It is not merely coincidence that 100 years later Massachusetts shares with Delaware the honor of having public library service available to its entire population. No other State can claim as much, though the District of Columbia, which has no rural population, is also able to boast that no resident is, by the fact of living here, deprived of library facilities.

On the one hundred and forty-third anniversary of his birth, which falls today, it seems desirable to recall why Horace Mann thought universal library facilities essential to democracy. And it is further desirable to consider the extent to which the United States as a whole still falls short of this objective. For, in the recent words of William Houston Branch, director of the American Library Foundation, it is a "terrifying fact" that the indictment of rural Massachusetts made by Horace Mann in 1839 "can be applied to the whole Nation today."

What most concerned the great educator, in his report of a century ago, was the connection between intelligent reading and successful democracy. From the cultural viewpoint Massachusetts was, in 1839, pre-eminent among the States. And it was partly to dissipate the consequent smugness on the part of its leading citizens that Horace Mann drafted the report which has so notably defied the passage of time.

By a careful survey he ascertained that only "one-seventh part of the population of the State" then had "any right of access" to public libraries. "What strikes us with amazement," he told his fellow-Bostonians, "is the inequality with which the means of knowledge are spread over the surface of the State; a few deep, capacious reservoirs, surrounded by broad wastes."

On the basis of the facts disclosed by his investigations Horace Mann inquired, in effect, What Price Democracy? Every autocracy, he pointed out, has always "adopted specific measures to educate the heir of sovereignty for the discharge of his regal duties." So "can the obligation to prepare for the responsibilities attendant upon power be less where all the citizens, instead of one, are born to the inheritance of sovereignty?"

This was a searching question in 1839, when democracy everywhere was young and virile and none had doubts of the future before America. It is certainly not less searching today, when democracy has been wholly repudiated as a way of life in many nations, and when the problems confronting our complicated system of government are gigantic compared with those of a century ago. The presence or absence of public library facilities is not alone likely to decide the issue. But no better measurement of the defenses of our system is likely to be found. Where knowledge is stored and attainable, people will tend to make it their own and act in accordance with its precepts. But when power vests in those to whom knowledge is inaccessible, none can blame them if they use that power blindly.

In 1839 Horace Mann was amazed to find that in progressive Massachusetts only one citizen in seven had library facilities at his disposal. Many Americans may well be equally amazed to realize that over large areas of the country the situation remains the same today. Most of our cities possess the "deep capacious reservoirs" which Mann found in Boston. But the continuation of "broad wastes" around was noted by the President's Advisory Committee on Education when it disclosed last year that "40,000,000 rural people, or 74 per cent of the total rural population of 54,000,000, are without public libraries."

It is true that West Virginia, where 88 per cent of the population has no public library service, is the only State which in this respect is definitely below the level of Massachusetts a century ago. But communities as far apart as Arkansas and North Dakota are nearly as ill equipped. And in many Southern States statistics for public library coverage are misleading, since service there is often limited to the white population. Of 9,000,000 Negroes in 13 Southern States only 1,500,000, or one-sixth, have any access to library facilities today.

A century ago this sort of picture so greatly worried Horace Mann that he urged a library for every district school as the most important action for democracy which his State could take. Massachusetts long since followed this wise advice. But for the country as a whole, according to the American Library Foundation, there are still "17,000,000 rural school children in 120,000 rural school districts without library service of any kind."

It is no play upon words to say that more men like Horace Mann are needed, to arouse America to conditions which sap the strength of democracy from within. The most serious threat is not from overseas and the most dangerous weaknesses will not be cured by building battleships. The birthday of one of the world's great educators, who knew from bitter experience the handicap of rural poverty, is an appropriate moment to see the fundamental problems of our governmental system as he so clearly saw them.

Unpalatable Tax Truths

Senator Byrd made a very telling and timely contribution to the discussions on tax relief conducted by members of the United States Chamber of Commerce. He warned his listeners that business must be prepared to endure still heavier taxes if spending continues at the present rate.

This is one of the unpalatable truths that business men are in danger of forgetting when they call for sharp reductions in taxes as a means of encouraging business expansion. No thoroughgoing reformation of the existing tax system is feasible or safe until expenditures are reduced to the point at which budget balancing becomes possible at a lower level of income. Under present conditions, the most that could be accomplished without plunging the country more deeply into debts and deficits would be to modify a few particularly burdensome and restrictive provisions of the tax laws.

The number one government problem is, in short, as Senator Byrd points out, that of economy. The scale of expenditures determines the amount that must be collected in taxes. If we reduce taxes without any assurance that expenditures will be correspondingly cut, we are simply heading for financial ruin. Like the spending-for-recovery advocates, some business leaders appear to think that there is an easy route to budget balancing. Cut taxes, they argue, and the stimulus to business will increase the national income so rapidly that our fiscal problems will be solved painlessly.

This argument is ominously like that of the spending theorists who believe that lavish governmental outlays will set the wheels of industry revolving and raise national income sufficiently to balance the budget without imposing extra burdens upon taxpayers.

Senator Byrd rejects such sophistry and points out that we are confronted by several choices, all unpleasant. We may keep on spending and piling up indebtedness until repudiation becomes inevitable. Or we may resort to indirect debt repudiation through uncontrolled inflation. Finally, we may elect to shoulder our obligations by practicing self denial and thrift. In other words, financial salvation lies in a combination of heavy taxation and rigorous economy. There is no other avenue of escape from the ruin that chronic deficits eventually produce.

Signs And Portents

It is high time for us to listen a little more attentively to the physical scientists when they tell us that the universe is gradually falling apart. Here it is May 4 and the Philadelphia Nationals are still leading both the Giants and the Pirates by respectable margins. In the other league the once mighty Lou Gehrig has gone into voluntary retreat because of the strange psychic disorder that renders him unable to hit even a perisphere with a trylon.

Of course it is possible that these phenomena, astonishing and eerie as they seem, may have some very simple explanation. It is well to remember how much our forefathers were startled by such now predictable events as comets and total eclipses. It is even possible that there is some salutary natural law behind the hats women are wearing this season. But how explain, save in terms of an already disintegrated universe, what happened the other day at San Diego, Calif.?

The management of a large apartment building in that city decided that three baths a week should be enough for anybody. Accordingly they had the bathing facilities of the building closed on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays. Perhaps they had been reading histories of the Roman, Byzantine and Ottoman empires and had observed how in each the period of decadence was characterized by immoderate ablutions. Thus the whole episode might be dismissed as another instance of awakening social responsibility—except for the well-nigh incredible sequel.

Certainly, the management might logically have counted upon the support of the younger denizens of the building for this particular piece of paternalism. What, then, must have been the superintendent's consternation when he found the building surrounded by a picket line of indignant children. One sign read, "We Want Baths," and another, "No Pride Here." A tremendous crowd gathered to witness this extraordinary spectacle and it was necessary to call both police and fire departments.

Any day now one may expect to find the largest apples at the bottom of the basket and to hear one's barber say, "Your hair, sir, is getting so thick that I would avoid the use of tonics."

America Is Interested

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The German government assumes that the United States is not an interested party in the present renewal of warlike activities in Europe. That America's interest is definite and direct must be evident to those who remember the late war and the treaty of peace which followed it.

The cause of America's entry into the war was a definite one independent of the origin of the war and of the sentimental feelings of its people. That is, with us it was not the war of 1914, but the war of 1917, when citizens of neutral America traveling across the Atlantic had been slaughtered by U-boats and when no promise of a discontinuance of the practice could be gotten from Germany. When peace approached in 1918, many were in favor of marching to Berlin and securing definite pledges for reparations and for Germany's peaceful conduct in the future. But Germany had cried "Kamarad" and America, in lieu of reparations or more definite pledges, accepted in good faith a treaty under which it was supposed that Germany, having learned her lesson, would keep the peace in the future.

Now, if another European war arises, Germany, under no definite or reliable pledges to discontinue her practices of 1917, would reopen the causes which led America into the war of 1917-18 by making the Atlantic Ocean unsafe for the passage of citizens of a neutral America. That is, the United States has never received any definite pledges to the contrary. Therefore, our Government has a first-class interest at this time in reminding Germany of the understanding under which a peace was granted at the close of the war of 1917-18 between the United States and Germany.

The writer hopes for an abiding peace and good will among all the peoples of this earth. He also believes that in the present instance the German people will find the discomforts of the present world conditions, which they share in, more endurable than the invited dangers likely to follow upon another war.

Are Foreign Affairs Foreign?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all this talk of America waiting till our country is invaded before we get into a war? What do Senators Borah, Johnson, La Follette and others of their opinion know about war? If this country is invaded, the Government will move to some safe place while you and I, the common people, will be loading our few belongings onto wheelbarrows, push carts or any old thing the Government can't use and trying to get away from the invaders!

What do these people know about invasion? They never got their shoes muddy in France! They never saw the artillery horses stabled in that beautiful Cathedral of Soissons! They never saw Fort Malmaison, one of the outer defenses of Paris, leveled to the ground! They never saw Chateau Thierry in the spring of 1918 before the German invasion and then in July and August after the invasion! They never were in Issoncourt, where thousands of Frenchmen are buried—dead trying to stop the German invasion at Verdun!

These people who talk of waiting till this country is invaded never saw that big insane hospital at Pinon on the Aisne River, where the German Gen. Von Kluck turned all those lunatics loose so he could use the place for his invading armies! They never saw the once peaceful villages shot to pieces. They never saw the beautiful orchards ripped out of the ground. They never marched up toward the front to stop the invaders, while the old men and women and children trudged weary way back from the invaders and their fair daughters were held by the invaders!

"War is hell!" but if we wait for an invasion we shall have hell brought home. We are not fighting English and French battles by getting in on the start; we are putting our defense on the other side of the Atlantic. I, for one, want to dig my trenches in Germany—not across the Mall! Let us take the fight to Germany and Italy. The war won't last long if their industries are bombed to pieces and the people of Washington won't be roaming around the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia!

And, to finish, let me ask Senator Borah what that English admiral said to the German admiral at Manilla Bay when he asked what the British would do if he fired on Admiral Dewey's Fleet. But let me answer it: "That is known to Admiral Dewey and myself!" The Germans withdrew their fleet. The results? Well, read your history!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That awful Hitler has spoken again. (And I do mean awful, not terrible.) And the little fellows who became so afraid of him that they voted for a neutrality law came out of hiding long enough to yap at his heels again, but at a safe distance.

Have the little fellows who start yapping about what he said as soon as he ends his speech ever shown his nerve and determination? Have they ever done for their country what he has done for his? Have those who said he was just a bluffer ever had the courage to call his bluff? Weren't they so afraid he would stampede in their direction that they said to him, with their neutrality law, "We don't care who you run over, we don't care how unjust you are, we don't care how many children you blast to death, just so you don't come in our direction."

Has Hitler ever done such cowardly "playing safe" as they have with their neutrality law? Do they pretend they don't know Nazis and Fascists have toasted this law and gloated over it? Could anybody doubt that the wives of the men who voted for this law know what a vast difference in manliness there is between their husbands and Hitler? And in Hitler's favor? I'd be willing to bet these same women, comparing Hitler to their husbands, secretly sigh, "What a man!"

A recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post contained an article on Hitler which said he has not much education. Well, there are millions of educated men, most of them very ordinary specimens of humanity, and only one Hitler. They were like sponges; they could give out what they soaked up, but could not originate one idea. Hitler seems to have done pretty well, thank you, with the little book learning he soaked up.

What you said in a recent editorial about this law encouraging aggression is true, but it has done worse than that. It is the cause of it all. They didn't start any war until they got that fixed.

Unless this so-called neutrality law is repealed, surely we should hang out, on our national holidays, the swastika, instead of the Stars and Stripes, and openly honor the man this law has so well served.

Hitler And The Americas

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That portion of Hitler's 2-hour-and-17-minute speech that was directed at America, in my mind, puts his admirers out on a limb. Evidently he does not know that it was largely the votes of German sympathizers, engineered by Senators Lodge and Clarke, that defeated Wilson's ideas and kept the United States out of the League of Nations. I wonder how they feel about being told by their Infallible One that they failed Germany when they fought our entry into the League, when they have always believed that they had rendered such yeoman service in keeping us out.

However, he is probably quite right when he states that had the United States joined the League of Nations, through its following of smaller states, it would have wielded a powerful balance of power that could have prevented the world from degenerating into the state that it now is in.

But when he states that he is not interested in the Americas he is either attempting to deceive or does not know what his country is doing in this hemisphere. The recent spy trial in the Canal Zone was just one leaf off the tree that Germany is nurturing in that section of the world. I wonder how many of our people outside of the intelligence sections of the Army and the Navy know that the Germans own and operate a fleet of planes in the Republic of Colombia only a little more than an hour's flight from the Panama Canal.

For President

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you not grant space for me to propose the name of Hon. Ralph O. Brewster, Representative in Congress from the Second Maine District, as the Republican candidate, in 1940, for President of the United States? His eminent qualications for this exalted place will be readily recognized by those familiar with his outstanding career.

Representative Brewster's splendid record as Governor of Maine and later in Congress altogether has won my warm admiration. He is not an amateur in the old, honorable field of politics, either.

As a newspaperman, former chamber of commerce executive and a former member of organized labor, it has been my privilege at different times to contact all kinds of people, and I firmly believe that many millions of voters in this Nation would certainly welcome an opportunity to support for the Presidency a man of the high character and marked ability of Congressman Brewster. While a Republican, he is not a narrow partisan and doubtless would attract a very large independent vote.

Republican Harmony

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "so-called" conservative Democrats might do well to peruse and ponder the brief "Analysis" by Frisbey Gilbert that appears among the editor's letters in The Washington Post of April 30 and from which the following concise sentences are quoted:

"Why all this furor about a Democratic candidate for President? The party is irreparably split, the majority being followers of the New Deal, and the minority would be helpless, even with the aid of refractory Republicans who are returning to the fold as fast as they can. The Republicans are in harmony and will be satisfied with anyone."

Mr. Gilbert appears to know his Republicans. That is exactly how we got Harding for President in 1920.

The Post Impressionist

Unfinished Stories

HE WAS a thickset, solid man, evidently of Teutonic stock, and she had a profile much like that of a pig. As they learned over the small-town jeweler's counter they might have been choosing chops for the night's supper. There was no more animation in the woman's face than as though she had been doing so. Probably there was less.

Finally she placed a diminutive wrist watch costing exactly $42.50 on her large wrist, where it was almost lost. "This one," she said.

The man reached into his pocket and pulled out a roll of bills. The trousers from which it came were baggy and not very well fitting. His coat rode his neck as though it belonged to some other man, from whom it had been borrowed. The business on which both were engaged struck the onlooker as absurd and incredible. These were two people, their whole appearance said, who had to work very hard for their living.

The man peeled a $100 bill off the outside of his roll and offered it to the jeweler, who was openly taken aback and cast a regretful glance at the more expensive watches that he had not bothered to exhibit.

"You have some smaller money," the woman said, looking at the bill as woodenly as she had looked at the dainty watch that now shone so incongruously in the midst of her wrist.

Without a word the man replaced the $100 bill and pulled out a fifty.

While change was being got and the purchase was being wrapped the two stood for a while as though made of marble, or solidified suet. Suddenly a tender light come into the man's eyes, and he patted the woman awkwardly on the back. A half smile, very self-conscious crossed her face and was gone.

As they left the store the man crowded the rest of his money into the woman's handbag, which she placed very firmly under her arm. There were a few sentences, very softly spoken, in a foreign language.

THE SIGN on the bathroom door said "Out of Order." But all day long nothing had been done to make the room available for the eight or ten lodgers who ordinarily used it.

"She's locked herself in there," the manager said. "In fact, she slept there last night because we wouldn't give her the key to her room. She hasn't paid her rent for two weeks, and she's annoyed several of the other guests. We'd just as soon she would leave.

"She's alive, all right," he added. "We looked through the transom."

That night there was an atmosphere of relief in the downstairs office.

"Yes, she came out," the manager reported. "She's paid her bill and gone. It wasn't a question of money. She has plenty.

"Things didn't go to suit her," he continued. "And she had a foul tongue. Knocking on the wall and cursing because a man smoked cigarettes and she smelled them wasn't the way to make herself liked. Or banging on doors and calling people down because they played a radio.

"She seems to want to be near people. All alone in the world like that, and with enough money of her own, she could go into the country and be quiet if she wanted to, couldn't she? But no, she travels about the apartment houses, as though she were looking for something and not finding it.

"I hope," he added, "that she doesn't come back here."

THE TRAIN was to pull out in 2 more minutes. The large man, with the heavy bag who stood wavering at the stens looked down with a sheepish dislike at the tearyeyed woman who tried to cling to him.

"I don't want to go back," she pleaded. "I haven't any money, and he'll kill me. I'm afraid."

The traveler looked at her hazily and picked up his bag. He mumbled something into her ear, and for all the bulk of him he looked like a whipped child.

As he started up the steps the woman clung in fearful frenzy to his sleeve. He brushed her hand off with some trouble, and hurried through the door of the car.

As he got halfway up the aisle he began to stand more erect and started to whistle very much off key.

A trainboy came through with a basket of sandwiches and hot coffee.

"Hey, boy!" he yelled with a self-confidence the world could witness, "bring me a ham sandwich and some coffee."

As he started to guzzle the coffee noisily the train gave a jerk, and then started to move smoothly out of the station.

Fair Enough

A Tour Of Vice

THE SUDDEN discovery and prompt suppression of commercialized sin in Kansas City conveys a robust political reek because Kansas City long had taken a mischievous pride in her facilities for vice and in her reputation as the Paris—or worse, the New Orleans—of the Middle West. These phases of life in Kansas City were widely publicized in these dispatches more than a year ago, after a study conducted under escort of a police officer assigned by Mr. Otto Higgins, the commissioner of that department. Mr. Higgins is an old colleague of the newspaper business who forsook his trade to become a lieutenant, or, better say, a field officer, in the political forces of Commendatore Tomaso Pendergast, the local duce, whose morals and methods, although indictable in the U. S. A., won him the official commendation of Benito Mussolini.

In conferring Il Duce's decoration on Signor Pendergast the Italian Consul in St. Louis observed that Mussolini always rewarded his friends, and this remark was taken to mean that the race-proud Duce appreciated the advancement of certain gifted individuals in the underworld of Kansas City, particularly in the highly temperamental field of prostitution. Discipline was strict in the brothels of Kansas City, disorder was rare, the monster's mien was made less hideous by remarkably demure living pictures presented in the display windows at night, and, altogether, the institution was a fine demonstration of what real talent could achieve with the sincere cooperation of a sympathetic city government.

It's An Open Town, Admits Police Chief

MR. HIGGINS himself was astonishingly frank and helpful for one in his position. He phoned up from below soon after your correspondent checked in and came right up to offer his hospitality and co-operation. What did your correspondent wish to see in Kansas City? The new city hall, perhaps, or the municipal theater, both truly prodigious in expanse, expense and grandeur?

Your correspondent, not knowing that Mr. Higgins had abandoned journalism for politics, said he was especially interested in reports that Kansas City was a wide-open town, having gambling rooms open to the street and uncommonly bold skin shows, in one of which ladies serving as waitresses shucked their garments, one by one, as they served the regular ten-course table d'hote.

Was this true?

Oh, to be sure, it was true, Mr. Higgins said, and phoned a police lieutenant to report for sightseeing duty that night.

"I am not in the newspaper business any more," Mr. Higgins then explained. "I am the commissioner of police."

"But," your correspondent said, wishing to hedge, "I don't want to be misunderstood. I want to write about this. Shall I be under obligations?"

"Not at all," said Mr. Higgins, "not at all. This is an open town. People like it that way. The locals know where the stuff is, and they can go there if they like, except that we don't let them cash relief checks, and the out-of-town trade always has come to Kansas City for fun, sport and amusement. You can write about anything you see. Don't mind our feelings.

Gambling Houses All Unmolsted

THE POLICE lieutenant was a thorough guide, who showed your correspondent everything short of actual murder and explained, as he went, the system by which the small branch gambling houses operated under managers and were immune from the slightest molestation by patrolmen, except in cases of disorder, and the main stores made their arrangements with a central authority, thus protecting the humble cops of the rank and file from temptation and trouble. There were craps tables of all social degrees, blackjack tables plainly visible from the sidewalks, roulette wheels and huge keno rooms in which, although your correspondent saw no matinees, the customers were said to be mainly neighborhood housewives.

It was something like the experience of an adolescent learning the facts of life in a frank, unsuggestive way. The lieutenant explained all in the most wholesome and disarming fashion, save only that he could not—or would not—reveal the mystery of the spark of life, the method by which these institutions paid their dues and to whom and in what amounts.

In fact, he said they were allowed to operate without graft merely as public conveniences, and that only intensified the mystery.

Gov. Stark of Missouri, in startled outrage, has now caused all this to be suppressed, and your correspondent feels compelled to say that it took him a long, long time to find out something that Mr. Higgins would have been proud to show him any time for years past.

State Patrolmen Enter Harlan After Beating of Miner

Harlan, Ky., May 3 (AP).—Additional State highway patrolmen bearing "full equipment" moved into Harlan County tonight after a miner was severely beaten and the situation described as "serious."

Informed of an attack on E. L. Lamarr, colored miner, who was taken from his automobile and beaten, Gov. Chandler warned that the State highway patrol is "prepared to keep peace, it can do it, and it will."

Capt. Carl Norman, in charge of the State police here, said he was informed several mines in the county planned to resume operations tomorrow morning

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Washington Adrift

FOUR MONTHS have passed and, with the notable exception of the defense program, the Administration and Congress have not yet dealt with a single question of national importance. Not only is there no agreement on taxes, relief, deficits, public spending, there is not even a definition of what constitutes the disagreement.

The Treasury, for example, is supposed to have a program of tax reform. But before it has been submitted to the Congressional committee, the Uresident, speaking to the press, and Mr. Barkley, the Administration leader in the Senate, are out with warnings that the proposals of the Treasury are not to be taken seriously. Mr. Barkley is of the opinion that it is too difficult and too much trouble to deal with the tax problem. The fact of the matter is that on the tax question there is a deadlock of views within the President's Cabinet, within the Democratic opposition in Congress, and within the Republican opposition. There is no such thing as a New Deal policy. There is no such thing as an anti-New Deal policy. There are the views of a few officials. But there is no organized political group inside or outside the Administration that knows and says clearly what it thinks ought to be done.

Given Explanations Held Insufficient

TWO EXPLANATIONS of this state of affairs are usually given. The first is that the danger of a world war has distracted attention from domestic affairs. The second is that the attention of all the politicians has become fixed upon the elections of 1940. The explanations are plausible, but they are insufficient.

The danger of war in the rest of the world is the strongest kind of reason for putting our own house in order. The prospect of a national election is the strongest kind of inducement to the Administration to restore prosperity as the only conceivable way of insuring a Democratic victory. The war scare and the elections are not, it seems to me, therefore, diverting the attention of Congress and the Administration from a program of recovery. They are diverting attention from the lack of any such program.

When men are confused, they are easily distracted. When they do not know what they ought to do, they become, like Senator Barkley, unwilling to do anything, or, like the Republican Senators, very careful not to pass from complaints to proposals.

War Mobilization Spurs Recovery

IT MAY, perhaps, help us to get our bearings if we fix our attention on the truly extraordinary fact that among the great nations of the world, the United States is now the only one left which is not mobilized for war. As a result, the United States is the only great nation left which has a problem of unemployment. All the others have reached or are approaching the problems of a scarcity of labor. The United States is the only great nation left with the problem of how to dispose of surplus production. All the others are confronted with the problem of procuring indispensable supplies. The United States is the only great nation left which is wondering how to enable and how to induce the masses to increase consumption. All the others are taking measures to reduce the popular consumption of goods. The United States is the only great nation left which has more capital than it now knows how to use.

In the rest of the world, where the great nations are either at war or in a state of increasing mobilization for war, the production of illimitable armaments is the one and only national business. All other enterprise is subordinated. This production employs, either in the form of men in the army or men in the munitions industries, all available labor and plants and raw materials and liquid capital. It could employ much more. So the hours of work are lengthened, the tempo of work is accelerated, the luxury trades are discouraged, accumulated capital at home and abroad is borrowed or confiscated by the government. In a war economy there is no limit to the demand for armaments except the available supply of labor and capital.

Uncertainty Blamed For Industry Lag

THE UNITED STATES, on the other hand, is at peace. And that means that the United States can and should devote its surplus labor and capital to improving the standard of life rather than to the production of armaments. But the United States is not doing this. And the reason it is not doing it is that Washington cannot make up its mind.

There are three courses open to it. The first is for the Government to spend on public works and social services not merely what is now being spent but enormously greater amounts, amounts comparable in magnitude to the expenditures of a government which is mobilized for war. We can get some idea of what that might mean when we realize that on continental Europe today the governments spend at least half the national income. For the United States that would mean a budget of about thirty billions. This is obviously preposterous. But thinking about it shows how preposterous is the notion, held in some quarters, that full employment can be had by sufficient Government spending.

The second course open to us is to spend considerably on public works and national defense and social services, and at the same time to place all manner of obstacles, real and psychological, in the way of private investment. This is the course we are now actually following. It results in a low level of production, relief rather than real jobs, chronic deficits, and a general demoralization of the habits of self-reliance and the spirit of enterprise.

Private Enterprise Must Be Encouraged

THE THIRD COURSE is to recognize frankly that we have come permanently on to a new plateau of public expenditures, that we are irrevocably committed, not to all the boondoggling but to a whole series of social services that did not exist in the Coolidge era. But having recognized that, we ought also to recognize that these social services can be sustained under our form of economy only if private investment is encouraged. Therefore, if the New Deal were willing to face the realities, it would insist on measures to foster private enterprise as the only way of perpetuating and enlarging the social services.

There is no sense in the present policy. It amounts to admitting that while the Government cannot possibly spend enough to create full employment the Government will take no measures that will enable private enterprise to make up the difference. The result is that with capital and labor unemployed, neither the Government nor private industry is able to put them to work.

New Picture Of Roosevelt

By Mark Sullivan

No Ghandi Apostle

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to understand any matter without taking into account the temperament of the person conducting it.

For light on the personality of President Roosevelt, as his personality bears on our relation to what is going on in Europe, there is material in a dispatch written to the New York Herald Tribune by Mr. Joseph Driscoll. Mr. Driscoll's impressions about Mr. Roosevelt are vivid, because he sees the President with a fresh mind and, needless to say, an intelligent mind. Mr. Driscoll had been a Herald Tribune correspondent in Europe. Coming to Washington a few weeks ago, he writes about aspects of Mr. Roosevelt's temperament which the rest of us have become accustomed to, but which have a new importance at this time:

"Correspondents in attendance upon President Roosevelt have reason to remark upon the singular confidence and buoyancy of Mr. Roosevelt in these troubled times. Those gentlemen of the press whose duty it is to follow the President gather that no speech by Hitler or Mussolini could upset the country squire who inhabits the White House.

"One explanation of the President's transcendental sangfroid is that he is capable of rising above the ordinary workaday frets and fusses, and that he regards even the most important world affairs in terms of a sporting game in which he is pitted against one or more adversaries, and is supremely confident that he will triumph in the long run—provided they are faithful to the rules of the game and do not cut corners . . . Even so, one gathers that if all rules were discarded, Mr. Roosevelt would not feel himself unequal to the task of holding his own or better in international combat.

Roosevelt, Chamberlain Declared Incompatible

"THIS BUBBLING, refreshing confidence appeals in a physical, unanalytical sense to one who, like this writer, has been exposed for several years to routine attendance upon the Prime Ministers of Great Britain. After having seen Neville Chamberlain repeatedly kicked diplomatically without adequate reply, it is stimulating to run across a President who kicks back as he receives, if not a trifle harder . . .

"Aside from the fact that they are both supremely cool, cocksure gentlemen, it is rather odd that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Chamberlain should be both striving to drive the Washington-London chariot.

"Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Chamberlain, as near as I can judge, are not compatible. If they ever met I am sure they should quarrel. Mr. Roosevelt is, above everything else, a man of action. Mr. Chamberlain, in his own way, is a Ghandi apostle of passive resistance."

I quote these extracts from Mr. Driscoll because they are an accurate and vivid picture of Mr. Roosevelt's temperament. I quote them because also they remind America of something that is vastly and soberly important to us at this time.

It is characteristic of Mr. Roosevelt's temperament that he should look upon Hitler in the way a player of a game looks upon an opponent or rival. That our foreign relations should be conducted in that spirit leads to a greater likelihood of our being carried farther than we intended.

President Must Sit At Head Of Table

IT IS CHARACTERISTIC of Mr. Roosevelt's temperament that he should become impatient with the less dashing Mr. Chamberlain. It is faithful to the picture that Mr. Roosevelt's temperament should drive him forward toward taking leadership of the democracies away from Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Daladier. It is not in Roosevelt's nature to sit at a table without being at the head of it.

That Mr. Roosevelt should have leadership in the contest against the dictatorships—that he should do more than merely give some support to the democracies—that is more than America ever intended. We did not intend there should be any "London-Washington chariot." So far as there must be one, we did not intend Mr. Roosevelt should drive it. Leadership on our part, instead of mere support, carries, of course, much more likelihood of our being involved all the way in whatever is the outcome.

Mr. Roosevelt's extreme self-confidence simply is not justified. His confidence in himself was useful to the country when he first came to the Presidency. His self-confidence inspired confidence in the rest of us. It was a tonic helping us out of the mood of depression.

Tonic Turned Out To Be Psychological

THAT THE TONIC turned out to be psychological only, did not prevent its having potency at the time we took it. But after six years we see disappointment after disappointment about assurances Mr. Roosevelt so buoyantly gave, or that we, too, hopefully inferred from the confidence with which he infected us. It may be that the presence of these disappointments makes Mr. Roosevelt now reluctant to think about our domestic affairs and makes him willing—much too willing—to turn to the new fields of foreign relations.

These things need to be said for our benefit and for Mr. Roosevelt's. The country will support Mr. Roosevelt the more effectively if it feels that his course is always arrived at by counsel with the best advisers in Congress and elsewhere. Mr. Roosevelt could profitably repeat the prayer of an ancient Greek: "Oh, Jupiter, may I govern wise men—and may wise men govern me."

Litvinoff Goes

By Barnet Nover

Which Way Russia Now?

THE SUDDEN resignation of Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, at a moment when he was engaged in exceedingly important negotiations with Great Britan and France, tends to throw the European situation into an even greater state of confusion than has obtained hitherto.

In London and Paris, in Berlin and Rome and Tokyo, the resignation of the man who for a decade directed Soviet Russia's foreign relations will be interpreted as meaning that the Moscow government has decided to reconsider her international situation and program. Nor can the possibility be ignored that the change in Russia's foreign commissars foreshadows a change in policy.

THAT MAY NOT prove to be the case. Litvinoff was not solely responsible for the very dramatic shift that occurred in Soviet foreign policy in the years following 1933. That change was the product of events and forces outside of Russia, principally Hitler's rise to power in Germany and the continued expansion of Japan in Asia.

Because of these developments, the Soviet Union found it necessary to abandon its hope of world revolution and adopt the more defensive course of co-operating with any and all powers prepared to do so in the maintenance of the status quo. But it was Maxim Litvinoff who gave most eloquent expression to Russia's conversion to the doctrine of collective security and has been most actively identified with the efforts to make the program work.

IT IS OBVIOUS that it hasn't worked. The Ethiopian war, intervention in Spain, the destruction of Austria's independence, the rape of Czecho-Slovakia, the attack on Albania—these have been way stages on the road to the utter dissolution of the post-war efforts to create a collective barrier against aggression. But following March 15 of this year, the day Hitler entered Prague, Great Britan and France decided that if the peace of Europe was to be saved from destruction, a new collective peace effort would have to be made.

At Munich those countries had completely ignored Russia. But it was not long before Messrs. Chamberlain and Daladier discovered that Russia could not safely be ignored. When the effort began to organize an anti-aggression bloc, it became apparent that Russia would have to be the eastern keystone.

IT IS AN INTERESTING circumstance that Russia was not opposed to playing the new role assigned to her. Indeed, after Mr. Chamberlain abandoned the appeasement policy, the Moscow government let it be known that it favored the convening of a six-power conference (Great Britain, France, Russia, Poland, Rumania, Turkey) for the discussion of a six-power alliance.

That idea was turned down, because Poland and Rumania objected. Instead, an alliance was negotiated by Great Britain with Poland and a proffer of aid to Rumania and Greece, should they be attacked and decide to resist attack, was extended. But the effort to include Russia continued.

Following the return to London of Ivan Maisky, the Soviet Ambassador to Great Britain, some progress was made in ironing out the differences between Great Britain and France as to the form the new European security system was to take. Russia proposed a straight-out Anglo-French-Russian alliance. British public opinion, as the Gallup poll shows, overwhelmingly favors such a course. The British people, during recent years, have been consistently wiser and more foresighted than their leaders. But Great Britain hesitated to offend Portugal, Spain, Poland and the Vatican—all of which were expected to take umbrage at what was certain to be deemed an alliance with communism.

After seven weeks, therefore, the proposed Anglo-Russian alliance is still in the paper stage. Litvinoff's second and last attempt in the direction of a system of collective security has so far proved no more successful than his earlier effort.

HIS RESIGNATION may mean the end of Moscow's negotiations with London. This is obviously a possibility. The indecision and delay of the Chamberlain government in coming to terms with Russia may cost Britain dear. But there is, as yet, no certainty that Russia is really determined to retreat into a policy of complete isolation. No great power can long sustain such a policy and Russia certainly cannot. However, the threat of Russian isolation may serve to bring Great Britain and France in line.

Another possibility is that Russia will make a truce with Germany in order to get a free hand in the Far East. With the war in China nearing the end of its second year, Japan's position is such that she could not afford to fight Russia without assistance from the Berlin-Rome axis in the form of an attack on Russia's western border. Given the assurance of Germany's neutrality, Russia might increase her efforts in China and end the Japanese menace to her borders once and for all.

All this is conjectural. The one sure thing is that, for the moment at least, Russia has again become an unknown quantity and may move in any one of a number of directions. And it is obvious that whichever way she moves will have a vast bearing on events both in Europe and Asia.

World's Fair Arrivals

"Four Calves Born at New York World's Fair."—Headline.)

Four little World's Fair calves are we,
Born in the thick of the pageantry—
All to the fair and the world quite new,
Here just in time for a fast preview.

Four little calves in a great big spot,
Where you'd not look for us, calves or not;
Born in the noisiest atmosphere,
Wondering just what we're doing here.

Four little calves, fresh as fresh can be,
Frightened a little by what we see,
Sensing the hubbub and all the fuss,
Wondering when they will christen us.

Four little calves with the biggest eyes,
Trying to cover our own surprise—
Striving to feel quite contented here,
Nervous so close to a perisphere.

Four World's Fair calves that are rather cute,
Wondering whether the boss we suit—
Wondering whether we'll make the grade—
Possibly making the Aquacade.

Four Exposition Events are we,
Things that the public should want to see,
Trusting that Grover will never pipe,
"Good little calves, but, well, not the type."

Four little World's Fair babes, that's us
(When we arrived it was not by bus);
Four little calves who have made Page One—
Being a Calf of Tomorrow's fun.

Four little calves with a startled gaze—
You'd have it, too, were you in our place;
All that we ask if the bosses sign us:
Don't paint or guild us, and DON'T STREAMLINE US!

Add Similes:

As old stuff as the World's Fair must by this time seem to Grover Whalen.

Then there's the pickpocket who stole a watch so he could start on daylight saving time.

The rest of the country has known for years that there was to be a World's Fair in New York. But New Yorkers are just discovering it.

Landon

serted the United States should not "enter any conference lined up with any group of nations."

President Threw Open Door

"The President's proposal of two week's ago," Landon said, "threw open the door to peaceful discussion," and "specifically exempted the United States from any desire to interfere in the settlement of political questions in Europe," while offering "the co-operation of the United States, the world's most powerful single economic unit, for an adjustment of economic matters on a world-wide scale."

Landon, who was appointed by Roosevelt to the Pan American conference at Lima last December, saw the possibility of an early "general American appeal to the world for peace."

Such an appeal, he said, should "state bluntly" the "horrible and terrifying prospect" of war, and "above all it could restate America's intention to be impartial in its approach to a peaceful solution of world difficulties."

He charged American foreign policies were adopted on "an emotional, spiritual and reform basis," which has made us "the proverbial 'sucker' in a game with professionals."

Must Play the Game

"We must learn that negotiations between nations are cold and ruthless, and we must play the game the same way," he went on.

He expressed "fear for America's ability to stay out of a prolonged and general war" because "emotional, economic and other pulls are already making themselves felt."

"Economic assistance," he said, "means, in the end, 'doughboy' assistance."

The Republican leader deplored appeals of "the left wing liberals who are the war party in America now" to make the United States a "stop aggression" force because:

"Aggression is simply the 'weasel' word to fool the American people into sending their sons to Europe to fight in boundary line disputes which have been going on in Europe and Asia since before the dawn of civilization."

"Millions of fathers and mothers," he said, "are facing the possibility that they will soon be walking the floor as their sons go into battle. On the face of things it seems that some nations are mad, and bent on ruin.

People Do Not Want War

"On closer examination, however, such is not the case. It may or may not be true of certain rulers. Certainly it is not true of the common people of any country. They live in hope of peace now, as always."

He urged his audience not to regard international conferences as "merely utopian" because "the only way to have peace is to talk peace."

"Even if such an international conference should fail," he said, still we should urge it strongly because "at the very least it would gain time and time always fights on the side of peace.

"The common people of all the countries of the world should resort to every possible means to stay in touch with each other."

If war comes, Landon said, "it is obvious, of course, that the so-called democracies would win," but "what would such a victory mean to the democracies, or to anyone else? After all, does anyone win a war—a modern war, with its horrors and its long-lasting after effects?"

Of the future of the United States if it keeps out of war, Landon said:

"There is no question in my mind that the command of the sea insures security in our land, for my time and probably for my youngest child's time. But the question that is bothering me is, how long can popular government survive in a world armed to the teeth and constantly attacking or threatening to attack; with trade between the nations at low ebb; with monetary systems disorganized; and a world going bankrupt by this gigantic armament race. The fact that we would be the last nation to be exhausted is poor comfort to anyone."

Reasserting his hope for peace he concluded:

"There were wars and rumors of wars 1900 years ago; but in the face of such, there was One who realized the folly of settling difficulties by resort to arms. 'Blessed are the peace-makers' applies not only to private affairs, but also to international relations."

Sound Prices Held Hope of Milk Industry

House Inquiry Told Troubles All Due to Artificial Values

By the Associated Press.

Blaming artifically high prices for the troubles of the milk industry, Thomas H. McInnerney, president of National Dairy Products Corporation, yesterday called on Federal and State agencies and co-operative farm groups to establish "sound prices" in line with the law of supply and demand.

He told the Federal Monopoly Committee that if it was impossible, because of farmer pressure or other reasons, to "establish prices on a sound basis," the alternative "will be to give all producers who desire to ship to the market and who produce milk of equal quality the opportunity of so doing."

McInnerney distinguished between milk which farmers sell for bottling at "Class 1" prices and the surplus milk—that which is left over after the bottle market has been supplied and which farmers sell at lower prices for manufacturing into butter, cheese and evaporated or condensed milk.

Class 1 Levels Higher

For several years, the witness said, dairy farmers, co-operative associations and Government agencies "have maintained Class 1 prices at levels much higher than the basic value of milk used for manufacturing purposes as determined by supply and demand conditions."

This, he said, had stimulated production by farmers hoping to profit by the high fluid milk prices, had reduced consumption of bottled milk and had loaded up the surplus milk markets, thus depressing their price levels. Also, he said, it had made possible price-cutting on bottled milk by "irresponsible dealers" which has taken "millions of dollars annually from producer milk checks in the past four or five years."

"If the dairy farmer understood these facts," McInnerney said, "I feel certain he would act quickly to help put the industry's house in order."

Solve Own Problems

McInnerney said he thought industry generally should be allowed to solve its own problems without Government help, but that temporary Government control of some phases of the milk industry might be desirable "if it is on a sound economic basis."

His business, he declared, "is punch-drunk from Government investigation." He said it had been investigated by the Federal Trade Commission, the Department of Justice and other commissions, committees and local governments.

"We don't mind," he added, "except it takes our minds from our business."

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, committee chairman, challenged the statement that industry did not need Government's help. "There has never been a time," he said, "when business hasn't been coming to Government for help and getting it."

Doctored Cream Sold Here, House Told

charged there had been an undue delay in filing the charges, but Seal insisted that he had only taken time to make his own investigation after receiving the complaint from the Health Department.

Asked why the corporation counsel's office and the health department had not co-operated in the raid on the Embassy-Fairfax plant when 2,400 gallons of cream was seized, Seal said:

"Several gentlemen, including members of Congress, called on the Commissioners and complained that everytime they uncovered a truckload of 'bootleg' cream en route to the District there was a tip-off.

Tip-off Repeated

"The Commissioners asked me what to do and I suggested that they let me handle the situation without the knowledge of the health department. Dr. Ruhland was the only one informed of my plans."

Seal, replying to questions, said he had not witnessed any slugging in connection with the arrests at the Embassy-Fairfax plant, although one man was hurt. He said he heard he had fallen down. No official complaints had been made, he said.

Replying to Shafer's inquiry as to the price of milk in the District, Seal said that the strict regulations of the health department caused producers to spend "an inordinate amount of money" on their farms and that this was responsible for high prices to the consumer.

Four Groups Charged

The charges filed by Seal in Police Court against the four milk organizations charged them with bringing 200 cans of cream in the District without a permit from the health department. Two counts were specified.

The information, signed by Joseph S. Simmons and Harold B. Robinson, stated the cream was moved on March 31.

Dr. Ashworth, questioned as to the difference between District health regulations and the standards established by the United States Public Health Service, said he is opposed to opening the local market to inferior grades of milk. Washington has only first-grade milk, he explained, while most other cities have several grades.

Even Poor Wouldn't Buy

"Commissioner Allen tried that during the depression," he said, "and it failed. Even the poor people wouldn't buy the milk that was offered for 6 or 7 cents a quart."

Dr. Ashworth, who said that "two gangs" are working now on cream "bootlegging" his office and the corporation counsel's office, complained that his men had been so busy checking on the milk and cream movements for the last two months they haven't had time to carry on their routine inspections of dairy farms and distributing plants.

"As a result," he said, "the standard of milk sold has fallen off. We've found the poorest grade of milk on the market that we've had for the last several years."

The methods and system used in the scoring of farms and pasteurization plants came in for much discussion.

Chairman Randolph of the District Committee, asked Ashworth if pressure had not been exerted on the Health Department to stop publishing health ratings. The chief inspector said he had "heard" that some dairies wanted the records closed. Randolph directed him to obtain more information from his inspectors.

Dairies Use Health Ratings

Shafer intimated that the dairies used the health ratings to "build up their advertising" so they could charge the consumers more for milk.

Asked by Burroughs how many complaints of cream "bootlegging" his office had had, Dr. Ashworth said:

"There have been numerous complaints. Almost every week we get them. I think they have been toying with us. Somebody is having a good time at the District's expense."

He explained that his men rushed from one section of the city to another to track down these tips, but never found any illegal dairy products in transit. One dairy turned in a complaint, he said, just to show that a truck at his plant was hauling away skimmed milk.

"I thought someone would report that we were bootlegging," the distributor explained.

"Didn't it ever occur to you," asked Burroughs, "that your men might be sent to one section of the city so that the bootleg cream could be brought in along another route?"

Decoy Trucks Used

Dr. Ashworth, questioned by Seal, said that often decoy trucks of empty milk cans were driven around a dairy to draw off his inspectors. He insisted, however, that the illegal cream wasn't moved in while they were away.

"How do you know?" asked Seal.

"Why the men put matches on the locks of doors where the cream would be unloaded and the matches were there when they got back."

"Didn't it occur to you," interrupted Burroughs, "that the match might have been moved and then replaced?"

Ashworth was asked whether he knew of any dairy that melted down unsalted butter and mixed it with skimmed milk or powdered milk to produce fluid milk. The chief inspector said he had heard such reports but had no evidence.

"Do you know of any distributor who makes a practice of installing heaters, radios or tires on the automobiles of inspectors?" asked Burroughs.

"No," said Dr. Ashworth, "I have warned every inspector to keep his hands clean."

The name of Hobart M. Comer, a Health Department inspector, who committed suicide April 12, was injected into the cross-examination by Seal. It was brought out that Comer had held the job of inspector of the local distribution plants and had been assigned the job of checking on the dairies after one distributor admitted in the 1933 Senate investigation that he had "bootlegging" cream.

Seal asked Dr. Ashworth why something wasn't done about the matter at the time. The inspector said that he told Comer to keep watch.

Seal asked Dr. Ashworth whether some dairies resort to the practice of cutting down milk of high butter fats with skimmed milk? Dr. Ashworth said he had heard reports, but that chemists are unable to make an analysis that will show that milk has been so cut.

Regulations Strict

During a severe cross-examination of Dr. Ashworth by Darr, the Fairfax-Embassy attorney called attention to the strict detailed regulations which the Health Department imposes on producers, and pointed out that they shut out producers outside the Washington milkshed.

He also emphasized that the District Health Department makes no inspection of the powdered or malted milk used at drug fountains, nor of the milk and cream used in pastries and candies manufactured outside Washington.

Under the 1935 District milk act, he developed, a local ice cream manufacturer may use Western cream for making ice cream, but must use cream from a District-inspected farm for the whip cream that may be used as trimming.

Darr and John S. Barbour, counsel for the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, clashed when the former charged that the association within recent years had bought and stored large quantities of Western cream in the District for sale to ice cream manufacturers without a permit.

Barbour said he would furnish information on the source of "every gallon of the cream."

Acted As Broker

Ashworth said he understood that the association did not need a permit as it was acting in the capacity of a broker. The association has since discontinued the practice.

As an answer to the testimony on Tuesday of Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the preventable disease division of the health department, Darr submitted statistical table on infant mortality prepared by the Commerce Department.

He pointed out that the report showed Washington's infant mortality rate in 1937 was 60.8 per 1,000 live births, whereas midwestern cities had much lower records. South Bend, he said, had a rate of 41.3, Minneapolis 38.6, Milwaukee 38.8, Gary (Ind.) 47.3, Duluth 34.3, and Baltimore 57.2.

Barbour remarked that none of the cities mentioned have as large a colored population as Washington.

After the hearing recessed Health Officer Ruhland asked permisson to bring a witness from the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department to "interpret" the figures.

The hearing today will be resumed with Dr. Ashworth on the stand in the Labor Committee room on the fourth floor of the old House Office building.

Stand Up and Fight for Beliefs, Byrd Advises Businessmen

Senator, Addressing Virginia Chamber of Commerce, Calls for Law and Order in Labor Disputes

Enforcement of law and order in labor dispute was empasized by Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, and by Lee Long, president of the Clinchfield (Va.) Coal Co., at a dinner of the Virginia Chamber of Commerce in the Hotel Carlton last night. One of 45 similar dinners held by State Chabers of Commerce, the Virginia banquet was attended by all but three of the Virginia delegation to Congress.

Senator Byrd deplored the situation by stating his humiliation at the fact that the United States Senate had found it several months ago to pass a formal resolution declaring sit-down strikes illegal. "It has been illegal to seize private property ever since the foundation of our Government," he stated.

"Fight Like Hell"

As for fighting, Senator Byrd advised the businessmen, when they find the Government engaged in policies they do not believe in, to "stand up on your hind legs and fight those things like hell."

Long gave the diners, who included the heads of some of the biggest Virginia corporations, a long battle between disturbers who he and detailed account of a threatened said were members of the United Mine Workers, and the workers and population of Clinchco, Va., on April 14.

Undertaking to protect a contract with his workers negotiated by the Clinchfield Employees' Association, Inc., Long told of calling on Gov. Price for assistance when a battle seemed imminent.

Gathered on Hills

"Trouble had been threatened for several days before, and outsiders had been coming from Kentucky and West Virginia. They had gathered on the hills outside of Clincho, where about 4,500 people live, and promised to come into the town. The day before they had attacked the automobiles of our workers, and gone into their homes in order to abuse them," he continued.

"I got in touch with the Governor and told him that unless the State could give us protection we would have to take matters into our own hands. He sent Col. Battle and 25 men, and we swore in and armed deputies. My corporation happens to own five machine guns, and a number of high-powered rifles and a goodly supply of ammunition.

"That day when the disturbers gathered just outside the town we told them if they attacked we would open first with gas, and if that did not stop them we would use gun fire. They started to retreat, and after that most of them kept going and did not return.

Maintained Law and Order

"If we had not maintained law and order," he added, "some of the sit-down strikers would not have been a circumstance to what we would have faced."

L. Hugh Nolan, of Newport News, former president of the State Chamber, and a director in a number of Virginia corporations, reminded the diners that Long's mines are the only ones operating at present in Virginia.

"You gentlemen," countered Long, "may think I don't mind this fighting, but it's getting to be quite inconvenient and a damn nuisance."

Others who spoke from the side of business before Senator Byrd and members of the House delegation were called on included Maj. Raymond Bottom, president of the State Chamber of Commerce, Clem D. Johnston, vice president of the United States Chamber of Commerce for the Southeastern States; Thomas Boushall, of Richmond, a director of the State Chamber; W. M. Jenks, president of the Norfolk & Western Railroad, who sympathized with Long over labor troubles; Jay Johns, of Charlottesville, chairman of the board, Virginia Public Service Corporation, and Curzon Hoffman, of Roanoke, of the Virginia-Carolina Coach Co., and other companies.

The only members of the Virginia Congressional delegation who were not present were Senator Carter Glass and Representatives C. A. Woodrum and J. W. Flannagan, jr.

Pinball Bill Is Vetoed By O'Conor

Legalization Hopes Of Prince Georges Dashed by Action; 240 Bills Signed

Annapolis, Md., May 3.—Three counties' hope of salvaging legalization of pinball machines were slapped down tonight when Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor vetoed legislation authorizing the devices in Anne Arundel, Charles and Prince Georges Counties.

Pinball machines were outlawed in the rest of the State May 1, when the State-wide licensing act, which the Legislature refused to renew, expired.

O'Conor referred to the Democratic platform in vetoing the measure. The party plank vigorously opposes resorting to pinball machines as a means of raising revenue," the Governor pointed out.

The proposed use of pinball revenues for charitable purposes in Anne Arundel and Charles counties failed to shake the Governor's veto decision. Anne Arundel would have earmarked the rvеenues for relief. Charles County proposed to turn the license fees over to the La Plata Hospital.

Cites Sentiment

O'Conor said he had concluded that a majority of the people of Maryland are opposed to pinball machines. Referring to the charity revenue proposal, he declared that the "lefthanded method of legalizing these machines would be, I sincerely believe, a breach of faith."

Earlier, O'Conor waded into a pile of pending legislation and when he finished he had signed 240 Statewide and local measures, leaving approximately 300 for future decision.

Heading the list of State bills signed were those setting up a dual conservation commission and consolidating offices of the State budget director and purchasing agent into the new department of procurement and the budget.

Both measures were administration sponsored.

Other State-wide bills given approval were:

Revise the old age assistance law, barring from benefits persons who have transferred property, in order to qualify for aid, within five years of application; require county welfare boards to submit annual budget estimates on old age relief administration; establish a commission for study and revision of State revenue and tax laws; grant control of State mental hospitals to the Maryland Board of Mental Hygiene.

Board Is Abolished

Also: Abolish the State department of mechanical engineering, revise legal procedure in American courts, require bicycles to carry lights at night, restrict fishing for rainbow trout to daylight hours and require fire extinguishers and emergency doors in school buses.

The Governor continued to delay action on the proposal which would oust State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones from office, and vetoed the measure that would have provided for the appointment of one State board of education member from each judicial district.

O'Conor said the bill, opposed by educators at hearings, would create "sectional antagonisms" and restrict the choice of able men to the State board.

Fairfax Health Director Gains Promotion

Dr. Holmes Goes To State Offices In Richmond

Fairfax Bureau of the Post, P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va. Phone Falls Church 2088-M.

Dr. Edward M. Holmes, jr., Fairfax County health director for the past three years, has been promoted to the central office of the State Health Department in Richmond, the County Board of Supervisors was notified yesterday.

Dr. L. J. Roper, State director of rural health, appeared at the board meeting yesterday to announce the promotion, declaring Fairfax County was rated one of the foremost counties in the State in health work and it was the desire of his department to replace Dr. Holmes with one of the best health directors available. There are at present four men with field experience for the position from among whom the appointment will be made. Dr. Holmes will remain in the county until July 1.

Dr. Holmes yesterday announced the resignation of Mrs. Hannah J. Wiser, of Falls Church, as health nurse for the eastern district of the county effective July 1. He said Mrs. Wiser plans to retire from health work. She has had charge of nursing activities and clinics for the past three years in the metropolitan area of the county.

Reinforce Jail

The board authorized reinforcement of the two outside walls of the old section of the county jail with wire lath and concrete. The old cell block, erected almost a century ago, has begun to deteriorate to such an extent that for the past several years jail breaks have been frequent. Old spoons, knives, and even wire nails have been used by prisoners to remove the bricks and motar.

W. Travis Wilson, superintendent of county public welfare, announced that a district meeting of welfare boards and workers would be held in Fairfax May 24. Members of the various welfare agencies in Northern Virginia will be present, as well as members of the various boards and supervisors.

A permit to use county property between Vienna and Spring Hill as a right of way for a high tension electric feeder line was granted the Virginia Public Service Co. The property was given the county several years ago by Mrs. John W. Echols, of Vienna, for the right of way of a road between Vienna and Odericks Corners near Great Falls. It consists of a strip of land about three miles long and about 40 feet wide, originally acquired by the Hines estate for railway purposes. The company agreed to move its poles any time the right of way was desired for road purposes. The easement must be approved by the circuit court.

A resolution was adopted urging Gov. James H. Price to reappoint Judge William S. Snow, of Alexandria, to the State Game and Inland Fisheries Commission.

Two hundred dollars was appropriated to supplement $600 raised by residents of Langley to put Waverly way and Ridge road in condition to be taken over by the State. These two streets form a connecting link between the Chain Bridge road and Old Georgetown pike.

Maryland in Interstate Move To End Potomac River Pollution

Will Join 3-State-D. C. Board on Basin Control; 17 Other Capital Area Bills Become Law

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, May 3.—Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor today signed the bill providing for Maryland participation in the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin.

The commission would include members from Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia, empowered to outline plans for ending Potomac River pollution.

The measure was one of 18 bills affecting southern Maryland and the District metropolitan area approved by the Governor today.

Publication of the real property reassessment in Montgomery County was approved.

Addition to the area directly west of the Washington suburban sanitary commission district to the District was approved. Montgomery police were given the protection of the workmen's compensation act in another bill approved.

Other bills signed include withdrawing a certain area in Chevy Chase from the Montgomery suburban district, fixing an electrical code for Calvert County, assessing Third Precinct, Thirteenth Montgomery District, for road improvements, providing for Gaithersburg-Washington Grove fire protection, authorizing levy for $5,000 Montgomery payment to Brookings Institution for county government survey, providing for Montgomery County road equipment storage, refunding certain Montgomery Hills road taxes, authorizing appointment of Montgomery special deputy sheriffs, ceding a Connecticut avenue area to Kensington, authorizing Prince Georges treasurer to collect sanitary district levies, increasing property sales advertisement fees to $1.30 each, fixing salary of Montgomery Court crier and librarian, fixing boundary between Sixteenth and Nineteenth Prince Georges districts, and increasing salaries of Prince George's treasurer's clerks $100 annually.

Bills Signed Affecting Frederick County

Frederick County bills approved by Gov. O'Conor today included establishment and maintenance of a county law library and creation of a Brunswick finance committee.

The Brunswick bill also creates the post of city auditor and prescribes his duties.

Licenses of female dogs in the county were cut from $5 to $2. The number of commissioners in Middletown was increased to five, and biennial elections fixed, instead of the present annual ballot.

Funds now held by the Frederick Female Seminary were transferred to Hood College.

Salaries of election supervisors were set at $480 annually. The supervisors were empowered to name an attorney at $200 a year and a clerk at $300.

The county treasurer will henceforth take office on July 1 under terms of another bill signed.

Myersville water rents were made prior liens against property, and waterfowl hunting regulations on the Monocacy River were revised. Emmitsburg sewer charges were regulated, and the Brunswick city council was empowered to exempt taxes on hospitals, factories and charitable institutions.

Clews Hunted In Maryland 'Torch' Death

Inquest Delayed; Driver Feared Slain, Car Set Afire to Conceal Crime

By the Associated Press.

Rising Sun, Md., May 3.—State's Attorney Edward D. E. Rollins tonight withheld plans for an inquest in the death of Robert Christie Taylor, 23, while police sought information to bolster their belief that he was slain and his body set afire in his automobile.

Funeral services were held this morning, and burial was in a cemetery here. The body was found, seared and charred, in Taylor's coupe on a country road near here early yesterday.

State police and Deputy Robert A. Boyd, from Sheriff David Randolph's office, spent today interviewing friends and relatives of the victim. A revolver containing a discharged shell was found on the smoldering seat, but an autopsy last night disclosed no bullet wounds.

Mrs. Wilson Taylor, sister-in-law of Taylor, said the point where the automobile was found was 2 miles beyond the place he would have turned off to go home. She said it was a road he never used. She said she was certain he did not take his own life.

Baldridge to Quit As Festival Head

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., May 3.—Tom Baldridge, director-general of the 1938 and the 1939 Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festivals, in a letter to members of the excecutive committee, indicated that his personal plans would not permit him to be actively engaged in the administration of future festivals.

Also in the letter, Mr. Baldridge mentioned that he expected the 1939 festival would break about even financially, and if there was any deficit it would be a small one caused by the curtailed income due to bad weather and smaller crowds.

All persons residing in the county are warned not to attempt to operate their cars with District of Columbia license tags.

Arlington — County Treasurer Charles T. Jesse announced yesterday that but three days remain for taxpayers wishing to vote in the Democratic primary, August 1, to pay their poll taxes. Saturday is the dead line, he said. Up to closing of his office yesterday he indicated that about 10,000 were qualified to vote in August.

In explaining who may vote at the coming election on all county offices, delegate to the General Assembly and State senator, excepting that of clerk of the court, whose term runs for a period of eight years, Jesse said:

"In order to be qualified to vote a person must have been a resident of the State at least a year and of the county six months, must have paid all capitation taxes assessable against him, if any, for the three preceding years, and must be registered.

"Any person who would be qualified to vote in the general election, which is always held on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November, is qualified to vote in the preceding primary on the first Tuesday in August.

"A person moving from one county to another or a precinct to another must get a transfer, except that a person may vote in his old precinct if he moved therefrom within 30 days."

Capital's Film Bookings Match Best in Land

National Survey Merely Checks Local Hits; One of Theater's Heroines at National; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

CASTING A CASUAL EYE over the Will H. Hays Office's monthly brochure, "Selected Motion Pictures," bearing date of May 1, 1939, it is interesting to note the film releases that are footnoted as "of exceptional merit." A few of them, of course, have not as yet been seen in Washington, but there can be little quibbling as to those which have.

BELL

For instance, among the accoladed pictures with which the Washington public is familiar are to be found "Dark Victory," with Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart and Geraldine Fitzgerald; "Dodge City," with Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland, still going on at the Metropolitan, and "Wuthering Heights," with Laurence Olivier, Merle Oberon and David Niven, which came off the Palace screen last night to make way for Walter Wanger's splendid production of "Stagecoach."

Two other pictures that the "joint estimates" of Mr. Hays' previewing committees pick out as superfine are "Man of Conquest," starring Richard Dix in the role of Sam Houston, and "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell," with Don Ameche, Loretta Young, Henry Fonda and Charles Coburn heading the cast.

About "Man of Conquest" we only know what our old friend Jimmy Grainger, president of the company that produced it, told us and out-of-town reviews have since conveyed. Mr. Grainger confided that his company had "shot the works" on this one and hoped for the best. That was before the gala premiere of the film in Houston, Tex. The reviews unanimously indicate that Jimmie's hopes were of the most substantial sort. "Man of Conquest" is "mopping up," in the quaint patois of "show business."

As to "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell," that superb subject already has been viewed by as many people in Washington as could be packed into Constitution Hall as guests of the National Geographic Society. It is a film production that does Twentieth Century-Fox proud and is well worth waiting for in its public release. But the wait in this instance is beginning to seem interminable.

Yet, in spite of all this, there remain those who write, call up and buttonhole your reporter to complain that the National Capital doesn't get all of the best pictures. There is no city in the country that gets a greater proportion of them. After all, the local managements can't go very far beyond 100 per cent in their top-drawer bookings.

Comes a cordial letter from Herbert T. Kalmus, president of the Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation, Hollywood, under date of April 28, which says in part, "May I express my deep appreciation of your views on Technicolor as expressed in your April 9, 1939, column. I have read similar expressions of your approbation at various times previously and I want you to know that such critical opinions are very encouraging to us. We are quoting you in our publication, 'Technicolor News and Views,' May issue." Very gratifying and my thanks to Dr. Kalmus for his courtesy and the bother of writing me. I do not recall precisely what was written in the column of April 9, but I do not in the least mind going on record here and now as being of the continued belief that all pictures should be made in natural color. It is just one more step toward that complete realism to which the screen is entitled. Color films, to be sure, used to be pretty bad; they would practically tear your eyes out with their faulty "tracking." Technicolor, now, under Dr. Kalmus' able direction, has become well-nigh perfect.

It must be pretty common knowledge by now that one of the heroines of the theater is playing in Washington this week. That would be Vivienne Segal, one of the shining principals in "I Married an Angel," at the National. Miss Segal's mother passed away of a sudden heart attack last week-end. Her talented daughter attended the obsequies in New York on Sunday and flew down to Washington next day to resume her part in the musical comedy.

In a chummy visit of an hour or so on Tuesday night, after the performance, Vivienne was insistent that I come down and see the piece again. She felt that she had given a terrible performance on Monday night. Needless to say, she had not read any of the local reviews. There was no flaw that I was able to detect in Miss Segal's ebullient Monday night impersonation of the role of Countess Peggy Pallafi. I can well understand, however, that there was much in her state of mind that might have convinced her that she was doing badly.

There is something here that is vaguely related to the prize-fighter who takes a terrific smash on the chin in the first round, works in a complete fog from then on until he knocks his man out through sheer instinct, thinking all the time he has lost the fight.

With a heavy heart and tears just back of her eyes, Vivienne Segal gave a gallant demonstration of courage on Monday night. That, ladies and gentleman, is what is known as a "trouper."

Then along comes word that Audrey Sieber, former mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, and Fred Shawn, local executive of the National Broadcasting Co., will be married in August. Announcement of the engagement was made yesterday by Audrey's mother, Mrs. Fred J. Sieber. The charming and talented Miss Sieber shares with Maxine Doyle, who preceded her on Thirteenth street, what probably amounts to Washington's long-run record—three or four years apiece, as I recall it. "Conglomerations" is what Frank Orth and I always say in these circumstances.

Verna Zorina, star of "I Married an Angel," last attraction of the season at the National, is being luncheoned today at Westley Hall, at 12:30 p. m., by the Civic Theater, so I am invitationally apprised by President Lee D. Butler and former cellmate Harry Hites. The Civic Theater will discover that "Angel" is one of the most charming guests of honor it ever has entertained.

Mrs. Robert Riskin, wife of the famous motion picture scenarist, has slipped quietly into the Capital for a spring visit. She is occupying an apartment at Wardman Park.

If we could ever get off the topic of "I Married an Angel," it would not be necessary to say that Warren O'Hara, company manager, is having better luck here this time than on his last visit. The last time Warren was here he was with the Col. Tim McCoy Wild West Show that curled up and died a prolonged death out there on those railroad tracks. Col. Tim was the only Arab in the bunch who folded his tent and silently stole away. All the other boys, including Mr. O'Hara and my old friend Tom North, formerly of the Tom Moore interests here, remained behind, holding a lot of bags!

Married 20 Times To Screen Spouse

Gloria Holden and Louis Jean Heydt have been husband and wife nearly a score of times, only to separate and go their own way, again.

This Hollywood marital record has been set, of course, during their screen and stage appearances together.

Right now Heydt is a truck driver and Gloria is his expectant wife in Warners' "Give Me a Child."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 3.—It's good news, and I think Frank Davis deserves a pat on the back. He's the MGM producer of the latest Claudette Colbert-Jimmy Stewart picture, "It's a Wonderful Life." His contract runs to June, 1940, but he got a release so that he and his wife, Ted Schlesinger, could write original stories together on their farm out in Claremont. She just had had a baby and sold "Girls' School" to Columbia for $25,000. First thing she heard on coming out of the ether was, "It's a boy." Then Sam Marx's voice saying, "Your contract—sign here."

HOPPER

They figure they can make more money writing together while living a happy domestic life outside the studio.

I met Pacita Paredes, 21-year-old daughter of the high commissioner of the Philippines, on "The Real Glory" set. She said it was so much like her own house in Manila that it made her homesick. The only thing Sam Goldwyn missed was bamboo floors—he couldn't get 'em! Sam was smart, he had her father okay the script before a camera turned. She'll play a tiny role just for the fun of it during a trip around the world. She's here to see how pictures are made. When she returns home she plans to help the natives start a company. No studios, all scenes to be taken on location and shown in Manila's theaters. But has her eye on future world market.

She loves the informality of Hollywood, says Washington society is stuffy. Except Mrs. Roosevelt, who's very formal at home despite her informal traveling activities.

Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men," following the San Francisco engagement, returns to Hollywood and will play at popular prices with the same cast.

Frank Nugent's article in a current mag, that Hollywood is using patriotic themes to fill its money bags, makes Jack Warner livid.

They were so busy snapping ex-wives, husbands, boy friends and Dottie Lamour's fur-trimmed sarong which she wore around her head, at the preview of "Nazi Spy," that they overlooked the best dressed man. A Chinaman, in a swish blue skirt and black silk dinner jacket.

The Maharajah of Indore has bidden architect Robert Hiden to do a house for him in Santa Ana—modern, with little touches of the Oriental. What, no tiger skins?

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 3 (INS).—When I talked with Noel Coward he was rushing home to England just in case war became more than a threat. If Hitler listens to reason and hostilities are prevented, Noel will return to Hollywood to lend his acting and writing aid in a treatment of "Tonight at 8:30." He was paid $80,000 for film rights to his playlets, we told you, and of course, he will increase that sum materially when he co-stars in them with Norma Shearer.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I was greatly interested to know how the nine plays, each a distinct sketch, would be treated. Today they told me at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer that four or five of the playlets would be combined with the same central figures, Norma and Noel, throughout. "Pride and Prejudice," the Jane Austen story finished by Irving Thalberg before his death, follows Coward's play. I am glad Norma is to do it, for Irving believed it was right for her.

You have all read about Joe Turp and his not-too-bright bride, Ethel. Damon Runyon, who first created these two well-known characters in a magazine yarn, "A Call on the President," has kept them alive in his widely read column. To know Runyon is to have a reading acquaintance with Ethel and Joe. Now you will see them both in a movie soon to be made at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. I reckon Damon put his name to the contract when he was here reporting the Roper-Louis bout. I fear me selecting Ethel and Joe will be another monumental casting problem, for every Runyon reader has his own ideas.

Addison Randall, known as Jack on the screen, has taken plenty of kidding about his horse and cowboy operas from his pals. But Ad doesn't care because he knows that Westerns are the most popular screen fare and the most profitable. He's just been signed for eight new pictures at Monogram, with two James Fenimore Cooper stories, "The Prairie," and "The Pioneers," lined up for him. In Hollywood we know Ad as a man about town and a gallant with the ladies, but when he climbs on his buckaroo with a gun in each hand he's a rootin', tootin' hero of the plains.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Sally Haines, Bert Wheeler's estranged wife, with Ernie Togler, local broker, at Marcel's; Buddy Westmore's devotions this week are given to Judy Starr, singer at the Paramount Theater; who was the beautiful blonde with Josef von Sternberg at the Little Hungary? Townsend Metcher, back from Honolulu, is being kidded by Freeman Gosden and his other pals about a mysterious "Mary"; Al Smith seeing Hollywood by night was a guest first at the Hal Roach preview, "Captain Fury," and later at the Roach home. He met Gail Patrick, who talks of nothing else these days but baseball; Mary Pickford, who wore the trickiest and cutest hat; Gilbert Roland, Sally Eilers and other stars who were at the Roach supper party. Gail turned down a picture because she wanted to be free to attend the ball games.

The hats the girls wear these days are mostly a bow and a flower. Virginia Zanuck wore such a cute one to the Roach and Jean Feldman was complimented for her white chapeau with its saucy nosegay perched on top. Johnny Weissmuller and the gals who swim with him at the New York Fair are attracting lots of attention. They do a dance and follow it with the same routine under water.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

'Castles,' 'Stagecoach' And 'Union Pacific' Among Screen Leaders

Palace

"STAGECOACH." A spectacular film of a stagecoach journey from Tonto, Ariz., to Lordsburg, N. Mex., this Walter Wanger production reveals the lives of eight people on the coach. John Wayne and Claire Trevor are the social outcasts in the group, but they become the most human of all. A bank president, a Virginia lady, a whisky drummer and a mysterious gambler are some of the other passengers. Burton Churchill, Donald Meek, Thomas Mitchell, Andy Devine, Louise Platt, John Carradine and George Bancroft are also in the cast. In the setting of Monument Valley, Geronimo's redskins attack the travelers. Opens this morning.

Earle

"UNION PACIFIC." Cecil B. De Mille's large-scale production of the building of America's first transcontinental railroad concerns a high-spirited daughter of the West and her romance with a Government trouble-shooter on the new railroad. Again Geronimo and his Indians are among the leading features. Success comes with the driving of the famous Golden Spike, on May 10, 1869. Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea top a cast that includes Robert Preston, Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman and Brian Donlevy. On the stage, "Revels in Rythm" is the revue and offers The Virginians, male sextet; Dick, Don and Dinah, dancing humorists; Carol King, dancer, and the 16 Earle Roxyettes in one of their new routines, "The Dance of the Cockatoos." Opens tomorrow.

Capitol

"SOCIETY LAWYER." A murder 40 floors above Park avenue with an ingenious killer who strikes during a penthouse revel, is the setting for this comedy thriller, a 1939 verson of "Penthouse," the success of several seasons ago. Walter Pidgeon has the title role and Virginia Bruce plays a queen of the Manhattan cabarets. Leo Carrillo and Eduardo Cianelli lead the support. Eleanor Powell makes one of the few vaudeville appearances of her present tour, her first in five years, heading the new Capitol stage show. A two-time visitor here for the President's Birthday Balls, Miss Powell will offer some of her famous dances and an impersonation or two. Two Andy Iona guitarists, who accompanied the star in "Honolulu," will be on hand with more Hawaiian music and Sid Tomack and the Reis Brothers; Tommy Martin and Gaynor and Ross complete the variety bill. Opens tomorrow.

Metropolitan

"BLONDIE MEETS THE BOSS." Blondie, Dagwood and Baby Dumpling return for their second film to follow the extended run of the Metropolitan's present tenant, "Dodge City," now scheduled to wind up Saturday night. Penny Singleton again is Blondie, Arthur Lake is her blundering husband and Larry Simms is the chubby four-year-old. Skinnay Ennis and his band, Dorothy Moore, Jonathan Hale, Linda Winters and jitterbug favorites, Ray Hirsch and Patti Lacey, complete the cast. Opens Sunday.

Columbia

"MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY." The highly successful screen drama of several seasons ago is revived with Charles Laughton giving his memorable performance of Captain Blight, the tyrannous captain of the H. M. S. Bounty. Clark Gable is Fletcher Christian and Franchot Tone is Midshipman Byman in this, one of the late Irving Thalberg's finest productions. Opens tomorrow.

Trans-Lux

"MACASSAR." The travalogue at the newsreel house this week takes its audience to the trading post of the Celebes in the Dutch East Indies. A musical short features Johann Strauss music sung by Christine McIntyre and Gene Morgan. "Smooth Approach" is a Sportscope with golfing hints and "The House that Jack Built" is the cartoon. Starts tomorrow.

Mount Vernon

OPEN-AIR AUTO THEATER. Tonight through Saturday evening, Paul Muni battles away as "Scarface" with Humphrey Bogart for company, and George Raft, to flip his memorable coin. Sunday evening, "The Little Tough Guys in Society" with Mary Boland, Edward Everett Horton and those brats of the title, will open to run through Wednesday. Disney shorts are also on the bill with the "Little Tough Guys."

Civic Theater

"THERE'S ALWAYS JULIET." The Civic Theater continues its presentation at the Wardman Park Theater of the John van Druten comedy with Virginia Brunt, Marvin Beers, Rachel Sewell and Kenneth Banghart in the small cast of a sudden Picadilly romance. This is the sixth play of the series of seven which the Civic promises its subscribers and will resume last week's run tonight and Saturday. No performance tomorrow night.

Glen Echo

THE AMUSEMENT PARK announces the final week in the ball room of Herbie Holmes and his 15-piece dance orchestra. The popular leader has been at Glen Echo since its opening on April 15 and plays for dancing from 9 to midnight each evening except Sunday. Nancy Hutson and Lloyd Hundley are the vocalists. The usual midway attractions continue.

Gayety

"BALLYHOO." This burlesque concoction opens Sunday afternoon, at the Gayety Theater, with the customary matinee. Joe Freed, comedy star, and Zonyia DuVal, display artist, are the leading players and Sam Gould, Ina Thomas, Louise Rogers, Cubanita, Lew Petel, Janeece, Rhythm Brown, Arizona Duo and a fast-stepping chorus line complete the array in this revue of song and dance.

Triplets (2 of Them) Tour Capital, Find It Beautiful

You're not seeing double, it's the Arntzenius sisters, Peronne and Constance (left, no right—oh what's the use!)

No matter how many times you count them the sisters Peronne and Constance Arntzenius are a majority of a set of triplets, but more remarkable still they've:

Traveled some 64,000 miles by boat, train and auto.

Visited more States in the Union than and learned more about America than the average see-America-First American.

Performed folksong recitals in seven languages and as many countries.

They were in Washington yesterday, eyes so clear blue, faces so bronzed as to make a woman's golf champion look anemic.

They've seen all the Government buildings, visited the Folger Library, done the Smithsonian. They've breathed the beauty of a blooming Capital and found it lovely, and now they're ready to start out once more across the continent in an American-made automobile that has just carried them 19,000 miles to California, Mexico, Yucatan.

They began their travels in 1914 when their father, an official of the Dutch Parliament, sent them from their native Holland to America because he feared for their safety in a country that might become a battleground of World War armies.

Then, as now, they left in Holland the third party to their triplicate birth 56 years ago. Brother Paul, they explain, is an artist and "too busy" for journeys.

There can be no doubt about it, traveling for the sisters who are indistinguishable when they smile, is a time-consuming job. They spent a year at their first transcontinental trek. The forthcoming tour will take at least as long.

The sisters have spread a meager income earned in folk song recitals here and illustrated lectures at home over a good part of the American continent and Africa by cooking their own meals and camping out.

Interior Secretary Ickes has helped, too. He gave them a letter passing them gratis into national parks which has so impressed people that it became a card of admission to private photographic dark rooms, among other places.

Right now, their greatest need, they say, is a radio program to "tell Americans how much beauty they are missing in America."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 3.

WELCOME: When Crown Prince Frederik of Denmark arrived in New York Friday night, he went to his suite at the Hotel Pierre and summoned an assistant manager . . . To him the Prince made his first request in New York—asking that arrangements be made for Frederik to take a Turkish bath at one of the city's clubs . . . The management immediately phoned the swank Racquet & Tennis Club, whose officials advised that before permission could be granted they'd have to hold a committee meeting . . . And so the royal visitor had his Turkish bath the next morning—at the New York Athletic Club.

DISCOVERY: William Saroyan was awarded the O. Henry Prize, because of his short story, "The Daring Young Man on the Flying Trapeze" . . . Doubleday, Doran—the publishers—sent the author his Certificate of Award, together with the $100 prize which went with it . . . Saroyan returned the $100, explaining: "When I started writing, I could have used five bucks, but nobody would stake me for it. I don't need this money now. So use it to encourage a promising young author who may be in the spot I was in when I first started." . . . Doubleday, Doran then notified Saroyan that they had discovered a new writer and the first installment of the $100 had been sent to him . . . Nothing ever was heard of that young writer again. The publishers learned that the author was in jail at the time. His promising career was cut short—when he was electrocuted for murder.

RETURN: Millicent Rogers, former wife of Count Salm and daughter of the late H. H. Rogers, is arranging this week to follow the path set by Barbara Hutton and Mrs. Lindbergh—the expatriates who returned to their native America . . . Millicent is coming home.

TURMOIL: A Queens manufacturer has been having labor difficulties with Local 16 of the Office Workers Union. The company is represented by Chief Assistant District Attorney Shapiro of Queens . . . Louis Boudin, the labor attorney, assigned Abe Shapiro of his staff to negotiate a settlement in behalf of the union. Both Shapiros are brothers . . . Yesterday an arbitrator was selected to settle the dispute. The arbitrator is Lillian Poses, Regional Attorney of the Social Security Board . . . And Lillian Poses is the sister of both these Shapiros.

SWANK: Dorothy Thompson, attired in an evening gown, visited the World's Fair. Grover Whalen offered to provide a car to take her back to the city . . . "No, thanks," replied Miss Thompson, "I have my own car here" . . . "Then may I give you a motorcycle escort?" Whalen suggested . . . "No thanks," replied Miss Thompson, "but I'd like a motorcycle" . . . And so the begowned Dorothy Thompson drove through the fairgrounds to her car on the back seat of a motorcycle.

DECORATION: Special Prosecutor John Amen decided this week that his office walls were too cold and bare—not at all conducive to making witnesses friendly and willing to talk . . . He therefore purchased a rich, colorful painting to adorn the outer room of his office. The picture was made in France . . . It's a painting of the Bastille.

TRIUMPH: Yesterday Peter Arno told his cook he'd like to eat a nice steak at home . . . While the steak was broiling, the flame became uncontrollable and she called for Arno. The cartoonist rushed into the kitchen and tried to dump the pan out of the window. His right arm and hands were burned, while the steak fell to the floor . . . "Don't touch that," he warned the cook before rushing to a doctor, "I'll be back for it" . . . The doctor bandaged his hands and arm and told Arno that he had second-degree burns—which will keep him from cartooning for five weeks . . . Arno then returned to his apartment—and devoured that full, troublesome steak.

DEATH: Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt McCarter, who died on Sunday, defended the suit brought by her daughter, Anne, who accused her mother of having arranged a sterilization operation which deprived her of future children who might inherit the family wealth . . . Mrs. Hewitt left no property of her own. But the trust fund under which she was a beneficiary now will devolve upon her children. Dick Brugiere, her son, will receive a $100,000 trust fund. And Anne Cooper Hewitt, the daughter who accused her mother of selfish interests, will be the beneficiary of a $2,000,000 estate.

FAME: When Sammy Renick, the jockey, went to Hollywood, Louis B. Mayer wanted to sign him to ride the Mayer horses . . . The film magnate's brother escorted Renick through the M.-G.-M. studios, pointed to its vastness and repeated: "L. B. sure is a great man" . . . After five avowals that "L. B. is a great man," Renick turned to his informant and said: "Look, Mr. Mayer, I'm sure that L. B. is a great man. But in racing, the great names are V. W., not L. B." . . . "And what's V. W.?" asked Mayer . . . "V. W.," replied Renick, "means Vanderbilt and Whitney."

Eerie Film Is Week's Revival At the Little

'Night Must Fall,' Starring Montgomery Reasserts Its Power

That best of all terrifying films, "Night Must Fall," yesterday began its final revival at the Little Theater. The film, which Robert Montgomery described on a recent visit here as the finest he ever made, is being withdrawn from general circulation.

It is no "Frankenstein" sort of thriller. It has no dreadful, unnatural shapes to send the squeamish howling for a good, safe cellar. It is, instead, a film of fine subtlety pitched in a mood of subsurface terror. Never once do we see a hint of blood, nor does an owl moan its mournful wail, in this unique study of a murderer by playwright Emlyn Williams.

The lady who vanished all these weeks at the Little has returned, for it is none other than Dame May Whitty who has a leading role in "Night Must Fall." Instead of being a wise lady of international intrigue, in this film she is a carping, dreadful old woman who prefers to be wheeled about her hidden cottage, a talkative annoyance to all, rather than lead a normal life with many friends and people about her. Amenable to flattery, she falls under the charm of a young page from the hostel of a nearby town. He is a sly fellow, whom the old woman's niece-companion instinctively dislikes. By careful exposition the boy's soul is unveiled as a psychopathic case, a murderer.

While the smart Mr. Montgomery has alienated some of his charm-worshipping fans by his superb characterization of so diseased a figure, one must cheer that he did so. For instead of the innocuous, though clever, drawing-room fellow he generally portrays, he reveals himself as an actor of great resource. By a slouching walk, an insinuating whistle and a commanding reserve, he makes the boy a vividly terrifying figure.

Besides that excellent actress, Dame May Whitty, Rosalind Russell and Alan Marshall have leading roles in a cast that also includes Merle Tottenham, Kathleen Harrison, E. E. Clive and Beryl Mercer.

In use in the University of Ohio as a classroom study of psychology, this subject is deemed by a star of the first rank to be his finest film.

43 University Rd., Calvert Hills, Md.
Telephone GReenwood 3559.

The Prince Georges County Real Estate Board yesterday urged Gov. O'Conor to veto the controversial bill to legalize slot machines in the county.

It was signed by R. M. Watkins, of Calvert Hills, president of the board.

The county commissioners indorsed the bill at their meeting Tuesday, claiming it would raise much-needed revenue.

The proposed measure has met with vigorous opposition from the W. C. T. U., churches and parent-teacher associations.

Don't Lose Heart; Here's Woman Who Reduced 90 Pounds

WE NEVER cease to marvel at the courage and determination of some of the women who undertake to reduce, and the number of pounds some of them succeed in losing is almost incredible.

Those of you with considerable excess to be reduced will be especially interested in the story of the woman who has just taken off her nineteenth pound. Since this enormous poundage was removed in exactly eighteen months, and since the improvement in her measurements was just as remarkable, we know that she adhered rigorously to her program of diet and exercise. The bust was reduced from a size 40 to a 34—six inches off; the hips from 42 inches to 35—a mere seven-inch reduction; the waist from 31 inches to 26—five inches slimmer. What a triumph of streamlining that is.

Takes off 51 Pounds

Most of you, however, will not have anything like that amount of excess weight and may feel a more personal interest in the reducer who has taken off 51 pound since last October. She writes:

"Last October I began the Twenty-One-Day Diet and I have been on it ever since. When I started, I weighed 183 pounds and now I am down to 132—which is not too little for my height of 5 feet 2. I cannot begin to tell you how happy I am! I feel better, too, and can run up and down stairs 50 times a day without getting tired. Before, I had to walk up slowly and would be all in when t got to the top."

To the person who has been overweight most of her life, reducing may seem impossible. If you feel that way, take heart from the woman who writes:

"I had been stout since I was a baby and everyone told me it was useless to even try to take off weight. But I have lost 43 pounds in six months—and have taken seven inches off my hips!"

Loses Burdensome Excess

Not only did she lose the burdensome excess she had been carrying around for years, but she also trimmed down specific measurements on schedule! That story is an inspiration to anyone who has been overweight for a long time.

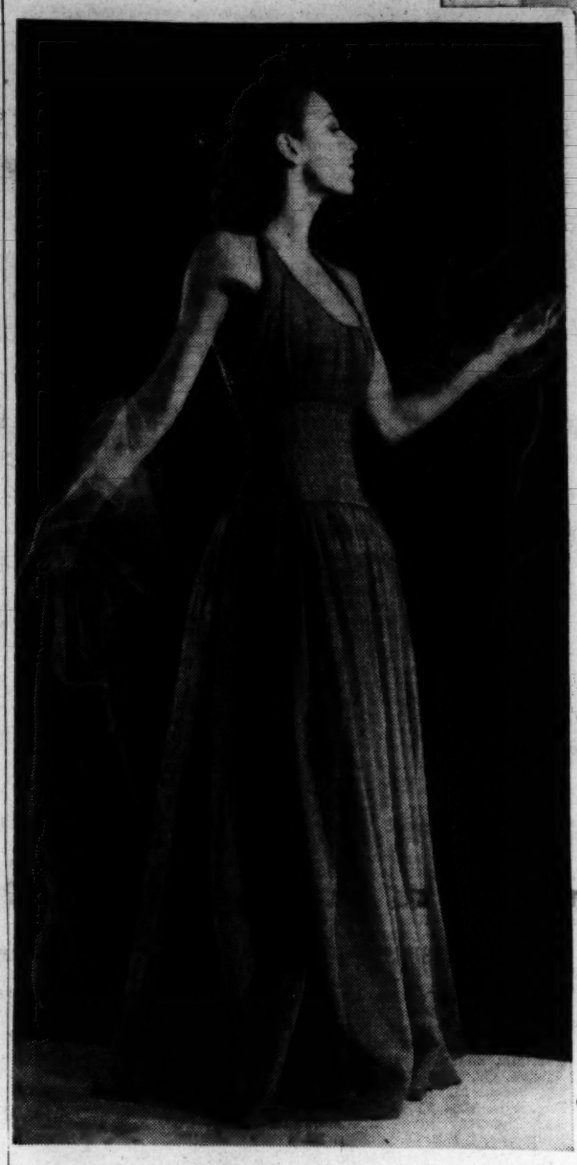
Waistlines—Up or Down? Here's the Answer

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

Here's the lowdown on this season's waistlines. They can be up, or down, or both, according to Hollywood style-setters. The movie city listened to its stars' wails about the unflattering new low waistlines, and to the equivalent evils of strutting about in high-waisted frocks, looking like pouter pigeons. As a result, the film capital concedes that personal preference in silhouette remains the only waistline criterion. The low swung waistline, which Parisian coutouriers revel in, comes to the rescue of the scrawny little female with no curves to write odes about.

Alix, Molyneaux and Mainbocher stitch pleats or horizontal bands over size eleven hips to hint at a Lillian Russell opulence. On the other side of the waistline fence, is Adrian, master of Hollywood designing, who girdles his glamour girls with high-riding camerbunds and lastex girdles.



Another exotic screen and stage star of the musical comedy, "I Married An Angel," is Vera Zorina, above. She wears a low-swung gown of foamy red net, shirred across the hips

Hollywood's super glamour star, Joan Crawford, is an exponent of the high-waisted silhouette which she wears, above. Her shirtmaker gown is of chartreuse chiffon, high-girdled in brilliants

Watch the Labels For Shrinkage Data

When you buy washables for yourself, the youngsters and your husband this spring, the Federal Trade Commission promises you protection from shrinkage sorrows if you'll look carefully at labels. According to the FTC fair trade rules, all shrinkage claims must be accompanied by a statement of the exact percentage of shrinkage remaining in the fabric.

To put an end to puckered hip lines and chafing collars, women's clubs throughout the country are putting on educational programs to show consumers what different percentages of shrinkages mean in terms of the human figure. For example, 5 per cent shrinkage means that a 39-inch hip line will lose two inches—and that means it won't fit.

Science has developed mechanical means of controlling shrinkage of all cotton, linen and spun rayon fabrics so that residual shrinkage will be not more than a tiny 1 per cent which won't affect the fit of the garments.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay,

Career Woman's Technique

Editor's note.—The problem of how the woman in business can combine being a Circe and the ever efficient Miss X was raised recently in this column in some verse entitled "Career Woman's Dilemma." A man correspondent, has now undertaken to answer this question by ghosting a reply for a hypothetical business woman. His contribution follows:

Mary, Mary quite contrary,
Give me the answers true,
To all these questions from one to ten,
They're much too tough for any mere men,
But simple as pie for you.
Maybe you're busy
And can't comply
So I'll help you out
With the how and why.
By ghosting the answers
To give you a start,
I'm no mere man
And I'm pretty smart!

I.

DEAR MALVINA:
I never indulge in babble or cant,
I let from Boss to the messengers rant,
And purr most sweetly at all my foes,
Till gallantry shames them
Out of their blows.
And then when the shouting
Has died away,
And twilight softens the end of the day,
I brush aside all their useless twaddle.
And decide quite calmly
Which scoundrel to throttle.

II.

Sweetness and light are easily exuded,
Most men are saps who are gladly deluded,
The other fellow I never beat,
I let him win till he loses his feet,
He gets them back and isn't dead,
But in the process he's lost his head,
As for softness that mold of jello,
It quite upsets the other fellow
And has its uses for eye appeal,
While camouflaging a mind of steel.

III.

In matters of policy, affairs of state,
The report that blisters I never make,
For honey dipped in ridicule,
Is a better poison for the fool,
I'm firm and sweet
Or sweet and firm
Take your choice of any term,
And as for squirming,
I don't wear pants—
It's them as does that has the ants.

IV.

(GHOST TO AUTHOR):
(I'll just skip over 4 to 9
The points they pose are rather fine,
And any male has jumped the post
Even if he is a ghost,
When he writes on female bloom,
And happenings in the ladies' room.)

V.

No analysis can be last
The present's swallowed by the past,
I'm not reduced to antitheses,
My sex I use like parentheses,
To emphasize my points in season,
And save much time and wasted reason.
Men don't act by intellect,
A syllogism's quickly wrecked,
By the voice's soft caress
Or casual lifting of the dress—
No, Malvina, never shocking,
Just a glimpse above the stocking,
And attention is diverted,
From the argument asserted.
Yet none can truly say I flirted,
Oh, I know it's so very stupid,
But Logic's still a slave to Cupid!

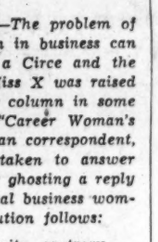
YOURS FOR CAREER WOMEN.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, May 3.

AUNT MAE WEST wasn't strictly leveling when she said that she thought "most of the World's Fair" would be on Broadway. At the same time that fabled street is doing all right for itself—pushing forth shows and fancy films and even fancier little girls. All the deadfalls and sucker-traps have "welcome" on the mat—but have forgotten to add "Abandon your bankrolls, all ye who enter here."



ALICE HUGHES

Why, the other night we had a movie "permeer" right in the heart of town that darn near rivaled the Hollywood kind. It was the opening night of "Juarez," Mister Paul Muni's latest epical opus, in which Miss Bette Davis, that fine old blonde Castilian, also appears. What a night! Jeepers, and also creepers! Autograph pests sprang up through cracks in the sidewalk like eager crocuses, only not so pretty, and all the youth, beauty and chivalry of New York turned out for the fiesta—not to mention a lot of mugs, heels and tramps in fine feathers.

The Hon. Josephus Daniels, Ambassador to Mexico, arrived with Mrs. Bertita Harding, from whose novel the film was scripted. Senorita Erma Najera, daughter of the Mexican Ambassador, wore a gorgeous jade green evening wrap over a frilled white gown. Local glam-girls, like Cobina Wright and Vivi Fairchild, dripped youthful beauty all over the sumptuous theater. And just to make the first night official, Hope Hampton swept in, all white silk and ermine and taffy hair and becoming pallor. Oh, it was a night, with all the girls trotting out their Spanish numbers—mantillas and whatnot. All they needed was castanets and a few gourds to rattle! And so for one brief evening, at least, dear old Broadway stole the show from Mr. Whalen's giant expo in Flushing!

A DEVOTED and busy woman has just stepped down from her job in the Salvation Army here. Colonel Clara van der Schouw has been in the army for 44 years, recently as head of the women's social service department here. A long life of service among the underprivileged and the poor. Good luck in your Florida retirement, Colonel. Up with the old flag—"Blood and Fire!"

Girl of 18 Becomes Recluse Following Grandmother's Death; Friend Asks How to Help Her

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The problem I am going to present to you is not my own, but that of my dearest friend, a girl of 18, whom I have not seen for three years, as she lives in another city. A mutual friend, who lives in the same city, has written me the following concerning her: "The little girl that you and I knew is gone. Instead, there's a hard shell; a girl who is bitter and cynical, who smiles to the world and cries to us. Toward you and I, only, is she the same . . ."

My informant goes on to say that this transformation dates back to the time of her grandmother's death, since when she seems to feel that the only two persons on earth who love her are this friend and myself. She shies off involuntarily from all society, masculine and feminine, and realizes it. This realization scares her and has driven her to self-analysis and reflection on her faults. Naturally, in her mind, her faults overshadow her assets, and therefore she has developed an inferiority complex.

She had a sweetheart with whom she went for about a year. This boy got a position in another city and has told her that he is going to forget her and that, when he returns, they will be through. Of course, this turn of events has only intensified her introspective attitude. Her letters to me about the boy have been very despondent, and she now feels that life holds nothing for her any longer.

Our mutual friend has written asking my advice, and I must admit that the problem is too great for my young head. I feel that I can come to you for the answer. I would like to know just what can be done to help her overcome this attitude, which has made her feel inferior to all those around her. Thanking you a lot for any help you can give me (and hoping you can make something out of this jumble) I am, yours truly, R. G.

A Dangerous Pose

DEAR R. G.: It would be my guess that your girl friend, at the time of her grandmother's death, struck a melodramatic pose of woe incarnate that is threatening now to turn into something more nearly approximating the real thing. I think that her sorry plight is—or was, in the beginning, at least—compounded of 40 per cent genuine bereavement of spirit, and 60 per cent theatrical bid for awestruck, solicitous attention: that one so young and beautiful should be required to suffer so much.

(I am assuming, of course, that her grandmother's death did not leave her entirely alone in the world, as we say; that she is not an orphan, but has a normal home background, with parents and other relatives to sustain and comfort her and who are surviving that blow which allegedly is crushing her will to live. For I assume that if she were without kinfolk, you would have supplied that pertinent fact.)

It may be that the grandmother, during her lifetime, coddled the girl extravagantly, investing her with an egoistic sense of importance out of all proportion to her desert; and that with her grandmother's passing, she has been permanently cut off from one lavish source of what we might call unearned psychic income. By psychic income, I mean a steady stream of ardent approbation and encouragement of this sort—"My darling, may she always be right! But right or wrong, my darling!"

Everyone's sense of emotional and social security is rooted in self-esteem, and one's self-esteem is fed from two sources: through one's own diligent, creditable and self-satisfying achievements, and through the approval, appreciation and applause of others. However, for the healthy personality, the second source is distinctly less important than the first. Indeed, the strong and honest personality would be the first to disclaim praise that had not been legitimately earned and could only accept it equably at the expense of knowing, in his heart, that he was playing the role of hypocrite.

I imagine that your girl friend, in addition to suffering the inevitable shock which the death of a loved one always represents, also sensed the permanent loss of the source of psychic income aforementioned, and immediately (and perhaps without knowing exactly what she was about and why) struck an attitude which she childishly hoped would make her as much the center of continuous solicitous attention in others' eyes, as she had been in her grandmother's eyes. She may have felt (rather than thought) that if she could convince her little world that Niobe's grief was a trifling thing compared to hers, she could muster enough overweening sympathy from varied sources to compensate for what had been taken away.

And she probably overplayed the role, until, on the one hand, all of her friends save you two began to shy away from her; and, on the other hand, began to believe in the part herself. When the majority of her friends became candidly surfeited with her self-pity, and bid for theirs, and began to avoid her society, she likewise beat a rapid retreat, aghast and mortified, and thus started the slow decline into the present quagmire from which she doesn't know how to extricate herself.

I have no doubt that she is frightened, confused and sick at heart. But I think her own self-conscious, self-centered, wholly unnecessary behavior was the initial factor in invoking her semi-tragic condition. I also think there is nothing wrong with her, even now, that a single act of the will—and subsequent more admirable behavior—won't cure. I imagine, for instance, that she was 90 per cent responsible for her boy friend's decision to end their romance. I imagine she used him as a wailing wall for months on end, until he couldn't stand the pressure any longer—and who could blame him?

The thing for your friend to do, in brief, is to cut out her nonsense and give more of a thoroughbred performance in the face of grief. She must, hereafter, earn whatever social acceptance she is to have; since most of us must strive, endlessly and tirelessly, for whatever good will and preference we receive from this largely indifferent world. If she "shies off involuntarily from society," let her second, voluntary reaction be one of courageous determination to overcome that cowardly impulse, and to go out and give pleasure to others, whether (at first) she likes doing so or not.

And if she is painfully aware of her faults—well, who isn't? But most of us, driven by the sheer instinct to survive, early realize that nothing good comes of dwelling upon them; and that the road to salvation, for us, requires that we give preferential attention to the discovery and employment of what useful faculties, and compensatory virtues, we possess. She must do the same. She must stop squawking about what she has not, and what she has lost, and what is wrong with her—and turn her attention to the brighter side, which is always there, since every cloud has its silver lining; and every pain its stimulus to growth in strength and understanding M. Wallis Chooses Prints for Her Spring Wardrobe

Paris (AP).—The Duchess of Windsor, who headed the list of the world's ten best dressed women for 1938, is breaking into print with her 1939 spring wardrobe.

She has chosen prints in both gay and sober color combinations for almost every type of costume from sports clothes to evening gowns. There are also some frocks and coats of plain fabrics.

Among the Duchess' new costumes for town wear is a smart black and white ensemble with a printed frock, whose bodice is of white crepe printed in black motifs and whose skirt is black splashed with white. The coat is a black wool redingote, sashed at the hip with black and white printed crepe to match the dress.

'Modern' Means Practical These Days

Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

Few people realize that the germ of modern furniture was planted back in Victorian days . . . perhaps in rebellion at the many impractical pieces that were introduced then. Many were the set-backs, and much time elapsed before modern furniture, as we are beginning to find it, appeared. Modern furniture is still in a state of change, but there are certain definite characteristics one finds in all truly good modern furniture. Chief of these . . . it must be practical, and if possible, practical in more ways than one. For instance, cabinets, bookcases and chests often fit together to form interesting wall treatments . . . as in the case of the bookcases shown above. Sound construction and proportions based on actual space requirements . . . these are two very definite features of all better quality modern furniture.

Royal Visit to Climax Week-end Here, Raising an Issue of State

Whether to Curtsy or Not to Danish Visitors a Question; Kentucky Derby, Virginia Cup Race Other Attractions

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

WHAT A WEEK END the coming one will be! Both in town and out there will be plenty to keep Capital notables entertained and on the run. A crowded calendar for Denmark's Crown Prince Frederik and Crown Princess Ingrid, who will arrive Saturday afternoon, and an equally full schedule for the President of Nicaragua and Senora de Somoza will draw scores of Washingtonians into the whirl.

Meanwhile, sporting society on Saturday will be divided between the Kentucky Derby and the Virginia racing country, where the Gold Cup classic will be the high point in a round of social and horsey events. Other Washingtonians who prefer visiting old houses to viewing a steeplechase or glimpsing a Crown Prince will be over in Delaware for the Dover Day celebration that annually revives the more glamorous features of eighteenth century living and luxuries.

Much as I'd like to be down at the Derby, out in Warrenton or "over in Dover," I think it will be just as much fun to stick around town and get an early glimpse of the first royal couple to visit the Capital this season.

According to present plans, Their Royal Highnesses will arrive in Washington shortly after 1 o'clock, and will go straight from Union Station to the suite ready and waiting at the Shoreham Hotel. 9t around 2:30 p. m., they will receive the press and have their first Capital conference. After that, the partying round for them will begin.

To Curtsy or Not Is Still a Question

And what will Washington women do about curtsying? My guess it—some will and some won't, just as they did last year when Sweden's Crown Prince and Crown Pincess visited here. But most of those who know how, will. It's a courtesy to say the least, and a novelty for us as well. So why not? Besides, a knee bent in the direction of Scandinavian royalty isn't one of those difficult dips you see around the Court of St. James's.

That reminds me of another problem. If you're one of those persons who feel strongly that there must be no bending to royalty on American soil, what will you do at the British Embassy garden party (if you're lucky enough to be invited, of course). That's British territory, you know, and when in Britain you do as the natives do. Well, 10 to 1, everybody who gets to that fete will be bending and bowing for all he's worth.

Kentucky Derby Drawing Many

Right now, however, a sizable section of local notables have other things to think about. Tomorrow night, the Farley-Robert special to the Kentucky Derby will be speeding Southward, with three streamlined cars filled with big-wige on their way to Churchill Downs.

Postmaster General Farley heads the list. Others who will be along with him include the Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John Hanes, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., Louis Bromfield, the noted author, who is coming down from New York to join the party; Mr. and Mrs. John H. Perry (he's president of the Association of Newspaper Publishers), W. C. Arthur, of Meadsville, Pa.; J. Leonard Replogle, of New York; Miss Beth Leary, of New York, and dozens of others. Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson will return to the Capital with the party on Sunday.

The Kentucky schedule for them is worked out down to the finest detail. They won't get there in time for Gov. A. B. ("Happy") Chandler's breakfast on Saturday morning. That's at Frankfort, anyway, and they will go straight to Louisville, board buses there for Churchill Downs, where they will have luncheon at the Jockey Club and be all set for the racing classic.

Among other Washingtonians holding boxes for the famed Kentucky Derby are Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Senator Alben Barkley, Representative Andrew J. May, who has turned his reservations over to a group of friends; Representative Emmet O'Neal, whose box will be occupied by Represenative Harold K. Claypool and his son, Forrest Claypool; Adjt. Gen. G. Lee McCain, Col Guy Chipman, Maj. W. H. Wells, Maj. Stanton Higgins and Richard Hilland.

Gay Week-End Planned Down in Virginia

Down in Virginia Gold Cup week-end is already getting under way with visitors in droves converging on the hunting country. Mrs. Juliette Crosby Hornblow, of New York, is expected to arrive at Viewtree, home of Oscar Crosby, her father, today and she will be accompanied by several friends. While Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller, her sister, is enjoying the Kentucky Derby, Mrs. Hornblow and her father will be entertaining at luncheon a large party, including several members of the Diplomatic Corps.

Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Larrabee, Mrs. L. Victor Froment, Mr. and Mrs. Amory S. Carhart and Mr. and Mrs. George Sloane are others who will give luncheons on Saturday before the Golp Cut event.

Mr. and Mrs. William Eldon Doeller will give a dinner at Prospect Hill tomorrow evening for their house guests who will arrive tomorrow for the gayest week-end of the year in Fauquier County, Miss Nancy Leiter and a party of six from Washington, and Thomas Leiter and a party of four, will stay at the North Wales Club for the week-end. Others who have reservations there include Mr. and Mrs. Barclay Douglas, of New York; F. Wallis Armstrong, of Moorestown, N. J.; Mrs. Huntingdon Norton and Mrs. Stuart Spilman, of New York.

Lee Mansion Rites Sunday

Lovers of historic shrines of America will gather on the spacious lawns of Stratford Hall, the Lee mansion in Westmoreland County, Va., on Sunday to witness the return of a portrait which once belonged to the Lee family. The picture, which is of Gen. Lafayette, was painted by Charles Willson Peale in Philadelphia during the Revolution and was Lafayette's present to his friend, Light Horse Harry Lee.

The portrait hung for two generations in the great house, but disappeared after the Lees left their family home. After an international search, it was found in the possession of Thomas Clagett Berry, of California. At the request of Mrs. Norman Banks Livermore, California director of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, he consented to its return to Stratford.

Formal presentation of the portrait will be made on Sunday by the French envoy, Count Rene de Saint Quentin. The program, which begins at 2 p. m., is as follows: Invocation by the Rev. C. E. Boxton; address of welcome by Mrs. Charles D. Lanier, president of the foundation; acceptance of the portrait on behalf of the foundation by Gen. James Guthrie Harbord; introduction of Breckinridge Long, the French Ambassador's address; the planting of memorial trees by Daughters of the Cincinnati, and by the Anne Carter Lee Chapter of the U. D. C., and benediction by the Rev. Buxton.

Some 40 Women and One Man Attend Mrs. Sayre's Tea in Spring Valley

ABOUT FORTY women and one man attended the tea given yesterday by Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, at her home in Spring Valley.

The house faces woods where the dogwood is all in bloom, and at one side of the house is a garden with a pool. Some of the guests ventured outdoors to sip their tea, but as it was a bit chilly most ended up in the dining room.

THE HOSTESS wore a spring print dress, street length, and a corsage of pink roses. She received in the drawing room, on the walls of which are hung several of her own paintings. Mrs. Sayre is a talented artist, but like Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, another skillful painter, she has to do her work in the summer, as official life during the season leaves no time for it. One of the most attractive rooms in the house is Mrs. Sayre's studio, which has an enormous window looking over the garden, and a portrait of Mr. Sayre over the fireplace.

The tea table was decorated with Spring flowers yesterday, and bowls of red and white tulips were placed in the other roos. Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, in a henna dress and silver fox scarf, was among those serving tea—a wonderful jasmine kind, pale green in color, and quite fragrant. Mrs. J. L. Houghteling was accompanied by her husband's sister, Mrs. John Curtis of Newfoundland, whose husband is a surgeon with the Grenfell Mission there.

Among those who called during the afternoon were Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine envoy, who wore a smart outfit, a navy blue skirt and pale pink blouse; Mme. Pete, wife of the Swiss Minister—they will sail soon to summer in Europe; Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat, with a flower-trimmed hat; Mrs. James M. Helm, Mrs. William A. Morgan, who wore a silver fox scarf over her suit; Mrs. Herbert Feis, Miss Marcia Umbsen, in a navy blue wool dress with Roman stripes at the collar and cuffs, nad a hat of natural straw with long streamers; Mrs. Donald Hiss; Lady Owen Chalkley and Mrs. J. P. Summerscale from the British embassy; Mme. Pierre Benech; Mrs. John Turrentine, and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, who wore a very smart black and white outfit.

Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Brown, another of the guests, had just returned from spending the day with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at Hyde Park. Mrs. Stanley-Brown is the architect of the new postoffice at Rhinebeck, which was dedicated earlier in the week. She and her husband went on the picnic which the Roosevelts gave for the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Denmark, and Mrs. Stanley-Brown said that the hot dogs served were very much enjoyed by royalty. Stanley Woodward, of the State Department, accompanied the group on the picnic and saw that every guest had a chance to chat with the Danish visitors. Mrs. Stanley-Brown said that the Countess von Reventlow, lady-in-waiting to the Crown Princess, is most charming, and spent the entire time taking candid camera shots of the picnic. Other Washington guests were Mrs. Tracy Dows and her son, Olin, who did the murals for the postoffice.

ANOTHER PARTY yesterday afternoon was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Louchheim in honor of Miss Polly Erhlich, of Brookline, Mass. The Louchheims are occupying the Georgetown home of Mrs. McCook, who did it over completely last year with the result that it is one of the most attractive older houses in that section. Two living rooms open inot each other, and have pale blue walls in contrast to the paneling in old pine.

Among those who dropped in yesterday were Henry Ehrlich, brother of the guest of honor; Mrs. John Howland, in a smart checked suit; Mr. and Mrs. Ganson Purcell, Elizabeth Morrison, Jane Watson, Theodore Dominick, John Drier and one or two others.

Miss Mary Johnston Heads Cathedral Group

Bishop Freeman Announces Appointment as National Chairman at Castle Luncheon

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Miss Mary Johnston, of Cincinnati, was announced yesterday as successor to Mrs. William Adams Brown, of New York, who has served for the past ten years as national advisory chairman of the women's committees of the National Cathedral. Miss Johnston's appointment by Bishop James E. Freeman was announced at the session of the committees and State regents, held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Castle, 2200 S street, followed by a luncheon at which Mr. and Mrs. Castle entertained.

Miss Johnson's interest in the Cathedral began in 1908, when she was a student at National Cathedral School. She has long been active in church work, and last year was chairman of the national executive board of the Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. Brown has been made an honorary chairman of the committees. Tuesday night, at the banquet given at the Sulgrave Club in honor of her and Canon and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, it was announced that friends throughout the country had contributed, within two weeks, a sum of $5,000 designated, in tribute to her, for the tympanum above the doorway leading from the women's porch of the Cathedral to the north transept. Mrs. William Schofield, of ePtersborough, N. H., was in charge of the presentation.

Many Representatives From New York

Reports of work for the Cathedral carried on by the women's committees in the various States were made at the business meeting at which Mrs. Brown presided yesterday morning, held in the library of the Castle home. Afterward, tables were set there in the drawing room and dining room adjoining where the guests were seated in informal groups for luncheon. The women were joined by the host and by Dean Noble C. Powell and Canon William Bradner, of the Cathedral. In the afternoon all of the regents and committee members were guests at the annual reception in the bishop's garden.

Reports were made at the business session by Mrs. C. Stanley Thompson, of the District, representing Mrs. Norman Livermore, of California; Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, representing the new regent of Connecticut, Mrs. Erhardt Schmidt; Mrs. Irenee du Pont, regent of Delaware, who was accompanied by Mrs. J. Thompson Brown, of Wilmington; Mrs. John Seymour, chairman of the Diocese of Georgia, accompanied by Mrs. Middleton Barnwell, wife of the Bishop of Georgia; Mrs. Walter Canady, of the District, representing Mrs. C. Decker French, Iowa regent.

Others who reported were Mrs. Albert C. Bruce, Maine regent; Mrs. William Coleman, of Maryland, accompanied by Mrs. Edward Simpson; Mrs. Allan Forbes, Massachusetts regent, accompanied by Mrs. John Lowell, honorary chairman for Massachusetts, and Mrs. William Bullard; Mrs. Arthur McGraw, representing Mrs. Charles Beecher Warren, regent for Michigan, accompanied by Mrs. Katharine Trowbridge, of Detroit, and Mrs. Harry Hyde.

Mrs. Hitchcock Among Delegates

Mrs. George C. Christian, Minnesota regent; Mrs. Alexander Richardson, Nebraska regent, accompanied by Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, wife of the late Senator Htichcock, and Mrs. A. L. Reed; Mrs. Schofield, New Hampshire regent, accompanied by Mrs. John McLane and Mrs. Robert Burroughs; Mrs. Clarence B. Mitchell, New Jersey regent; Mrs. Ernest R. Adee, regent of eastern New York State and vice chairman of the New York City committee, serving with Mrs. Frederic Rhinelander, daughter of the late Bishop Henry Yates Satterlee, first Bishop of Washington. Also from New York were Mrs. C. Merrill Chapin, Mrs. Russell C. LaLnLLgdon, Mrs. Keneth Ackerman, Mrs. William T. Hildrup and Miss Winifred Bonnell, executive secretary for New York City. Finnish Women Lead World In Freedom, Says Club Leader

Mrs. Voipio, Outstanding Reporter, Is in U. S. to 'Cover' Tour of Finlandia Male Chorus and World's Fair Opening

Women in Finland have the best position of any in the world but sometimes do not make the best use of it, according to Mrs. Anni Voipio, distinguished newspaper woman and president of the Finnish Business and Professional Women's Club. Mrs. Voipio, condered one of the outstanding newspaper women in northern Europe, has been a member of the reportorial staff of Uusi Suomi for 13 years and is now in the United States to "cover" the tour of the Finlandia Male Chorus, the Finnish Trde Delegation and the opening of the Finnish Pavilion at the World's Fair. She has spent the past two days in Washington.

While ineligible for military service and customs service, the Finnish women have all other rights accorded men. There are 16 among the 200 members of Parliament, and a campaign is under way to increase the number in the parliamentary elections in July.

Likes Energy Of Americans

Mrs. Voipio, an energetic person, with fair hair, blue eyes and a direct manner of speaking very good English, is most impressed with the energy and rapid tempo of life in America. She has the feeling that Americans are working hard and trying to do their jobs well—and she likes what she has seen of the United States in the brief three weeks of her first visit here.

She will be honored at a reception to be given May 14 at the Biltmore Hotel in New York by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and sails for Finland May 17.

Mrs. Voipio was the originator and first president of the Finnish B and P. W. Club in 1931. Serving with her as the club's first secretary for a short time was Mme. Jannefelt, wife of the former Finnish Minister to Washington. Mme. Jarnefelt, a close friend of Mrs. Voipio, was a member of the staff of the other large daily in Helsingfors and retains her membership in the club she helped to found.

Its membership standards are high, requiring that the individual must have attained a place for herself in her business or profession in order to belong, says Mrs. Voipio. In addition to the members in the usual fields for women, there is one who owns and directs a large sausage factory, another who manages a textile plant and others who head lumber and shipping interests. There is also a member who owns and manages a large chain of theaters.

Finnish Women Favor Equal Rights

The club is active in seeking additional social reforms to those already carried out under the country's progressive program, and has recently published a pamphlet on the feminist movement. Finnish women, as a whole, are strongly in favor of equal rights, Mrs. Voipio says.

Heated discussion on the proposed transfer brought cries from numerous delegates that the plan was "illegal" and "undemocratic."

Spokesmen for the board of managers said growth of the organization made necessary a more central administrative setup. A motion to concur ni the board's recommendation carried, 275 to 213.

Dr. Artan, former minister and college professor now active in Chicago civic and welfare enterprises, and chairman of the Congress' character education section, was elected 260 to 233 over Dr. William McKinley Robinson of Western State Teachers' College, Kalamazoo, Mich.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, Mo., May 3.—Lou Gehrig Voluntarily Ends Consecutive-Game Streak—An incongruous figure on the Yankees' bench, Lou Gehrig in his idleness now has time to ponder whether his feat of playing in 2,130 consecutive games was worth the effort. It did take effort. There were days when the Iron Horse was frankly tired, days when a damaged toe meant pain at every step, and weeks during which lumbago wracked him.

POVICH

The record he compiled was something to be proud of. It denoted a durability and physical fortitude that was remarkable. But for Gehrig it was probably as costly as it was remarkable. The torture he underwent to preserve his streak left their mark on him. When he finally cracked, he fell apart completely.

The end of his consecutive-game streak probably means the end of the trail for Gehrig. He is supposed to be enjoying a rest now, but if he ever returns to the Yankee line-up for any extended period, it will be surprising. He drove his body too hard during those 14 years when he didn't miss a Yankee game. The Iron Horse is worn out.

Biggest Salary for Sitting on Bench

His idleness, however, shouldn't be hard to take. For sitting on the Yankees' bench this season, he will be drawing more salary than any other player in the league is getting for playing baseball every day. Every two weeks during the season, he will draw a check for approximately $3,000. His contract for 1939 reads, you remember, $35,000.

But he might have been drawing that salary or most of it for many years to come if he hadn't persisted in driving himself to amass a record that, aside from its remarkability in a physical way, is quite meaningless. Gehrig, after 14 years in the big leagues, is unquestionably through. Gehrig might have been a 20-year man in the big leagues.

Technician Runs Second in Derby Test—It was more than a bit surprising, the other day, when the Woolford Farms' chief Derby hope was beaten by an outsider a mile four days before he was scheduled to go to the post in the $50,000 Derby. But if the Woolford Farms people are given to hunches, then there was much consolation for them.

More and more the Derby picture is beginning to assume the pattern of the 1938 Derby. And that, you remember was a triumph for Woolford Farms, which sent Lawrin to the post.

Like the winner of the 1938 Derby, Technician is a son of Insco. Like Lawrin, he is owned by Herbert M. Woolf, of Kansas City, and trained by Ben Jones, of Parhell, Mo. And, like Lawrin, Technician was only a fair-to-middlin' 2-year-old.

The similarity doesn't stop there. Like Lawrin, his half-brother, Technician showed fine 3-year-old form by winning the $20,000 Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah. In a remarkable way, Technician was treading in the footsteps of the '38 Derby winner.

They Seem to Have It Now

And now we begin to get down to finer cases. Because when Technician was beaten out on the wire—by a nose—in the trial run at Churchill, it was another of the long chain of identical circumstances. For just a year ago it was Lawrin who was beaten in that same race—also by a nose, and also by an outsider. If ever the Woolford Farms people wanted a harbinger of victory for Saturday's Derby, they seem to have it now.

In short—The Washington club failed to make its traveling and hotel expenses during the two-game series here with the Browns, which produced only 1,800 paid admissions . . . The new photo-finish apparatus installed at the Fairmount track near St. Louis is so rapid that it takes a picture of a horse for every inch and a quarter that the horse moves . . . Alex Alexandra, the Venezuelan who is assuming stature as the Nats' No. 1 relief pitcher, broke into the big leagues the hard way . . . The first time he ever toed a big league mound, he found the bases full of Yankees with Joe DiMaggio up . . . His next assignment found him going to the mound with the bases again full of Yanks and Joe Gordon at bat . . . George Case's speed on the bases is inducing errors on the part of enemy infielders who are forced to hurry their throws . . . New York ball clubs are expecting no increase in patronage from the World Fair . . . Research showed that during the two years of the Chicago Fair, the attendance at the Cubs and White Sox game not only failed to increase but actually sagged.

Book Reveals Kids Played Ball in 1787

In Same Year Princeton University Prohibited Students From Participating In Game 'Unbecoming to Gentlemen'

By Al Hailey.

The skeleton in the closet of the great American game of baseball has come out at last. Centennial year, 100 years young—such stuff. American kids were playing baseball before 1800.

Proof enough to cast all manner of doubt over the claims that Abner Doubleday "devised" baseball 100 years ago is presented in a book printed in 1787 showing children playing the manly game.

Furthermore, baseball was having a tough time of it in 1787, for that same year at Princeton University a proclamation was issued prohibiting the men of Princeton from playing "with balls and sticks in the back common of the college" as it "is itself low and unbecoming to gentlemen students."

Baseball, in fact, was strictly a game for the kiddies—and more for the "pampered brat" type of young ones at that.

For "Pampered Kids"

This startling expose of the past of America's greatest sport was staged yesterday in—of all places—the rare book section of the Library of Congress.

The book produced by Curator Valta Parma is a child's book—one of those platitudinous volumes gotten up to teach the young the alphabet and at the same time furnish entertainment. The title itself is a disgusting thing and almost immediately brands all within as sissy games. The title:

"A little pretty pocketbook intended for the instruction and amusement of little Master Tommy and pretty Miss Polly. With two letters from Jack the Giant-Killer; as also a ball and pincushion; the use of which will infallibly make Tommy a good boy and Polly a good girl. To which is added a little song book, being a new attempt to teach children the use of the English alphabet, by way of diversion.

On page 43 of the book—smaller than a cigarette case and covered with a green silk binding—a woodcut shows the game of baseball as played by three youngsters.

"The Ball once struck off, Away flies the Bay To the next destined Post, And then Home with Joy," reads the fetching rhyme under the cut, while the moral goes, "Thus Seamen, for Lucre Fly over the Main, But, with Pleasure transported, Return back again."

The book was printed in Worcester, Mass., is 1787 by Isaiah Thomas, who actually pirated it from a London publisher, who first brought the book out of England in 1744.

Promoters of the game today will have you believe it a game of bearded behemoths. At this, Curator Parma merely sniffed and forthwith presented more on baseball's hidden past.

Played Before 1748

In 1748, Lady Lepell Hervey in her "Letters" wrote of "base-ball, a play all who are, or have been schoolboys, are acquainted with."

Jane Austen, the English writer, in her book, "Northanger Abbey," published in 1815, refers to her heroine, Catherine, in the role of a tomboy at 14. Catherine, she wrote, had a yen for cricket, baseball and riding horseback.

While adults might have been caught playing baseball in those days, it was generally regarded as a gentle pastime for children.

The shelves of the Congressional Library abound with juicy selections on the manly sport of baseball—both before and immediately after its "birth" in 1839. The name of Doubleday is glaringly absent. Perhaps Doubleday himself would be confused if he could know of his strange honor.

At the time he was said to have been in Cooperstown drawing up rules for the game and naming it baseball he was registered as a student at the Academy at West Point.

Wasdell Atones For 4 Errors With Game-Winning Hit; Alex Stars in Relief

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, May 3.—Washington's winning streak survived a three-hour onslaught by the St. Louis Browns today, plus a bit of sabotage in the form of four errors by First Baseman Jimmy Wasdell.

The upshot of the drawn-out proceedings was an 11-10 victory for the Nats, who came up with a three-run rally in the ninth to move into third place in the American League with their fifth straight victory.

Paradoxically it was Wasdell, whose four errors tied the American League record for misplays by a first baseman in a single game, who proved something of a hero for the Nats today. It was his hit in the ninth inning which drove in Washington's winning run.

Prospects of a Washington victory were blacker than a stygian night as late as the seventh inning when the Browns, having knocked Dutch Leonard out of the box, and treated Bud Thomas roughly, were holding a 10-4 lead.

Chase Newsom

And then the Nats began to prove very stubborn. They knocked Buck Newsom out of the box, packed a pair of runs into the seventh inning, two more into the eighth to cut the Browns' margin to 10-8, and won the game with a heroic three-run uprising in the ninth.

Johnny Marcum, the big former Red Sox, had quelled the Nats' eighth-inning rally after Newsom left the scene, but in the ninth he was no great asset to the Browns. George Case greeted him with a single to right-center and it was the beginning of four Washington hits that were to win the ball game.

Buddy Lewis breathed life into the rally with a single to right, and Taft Wright produced a single to left that scored Case, moved Lewis to third, put the tying run on base and knocked Marcum out of the picture.

In came the left-handed rookie, Ewald Pyle, to pitch to Buddy Myer, and Myer ushered Lewis home from third with the tying run on a grounder to Second Baseman Don Heffner, Wright moving to third. Travis drew a walk and then it was that Wasdell atoned grandly for his errors by bashing a single into leftfield to score Wright with the run that won the ball game.

The Nats' winning pitcher was, ultimately, Alex Alexandra, who found his way into the game as a relief pitcher in the eighth, survived that inning nicely and then made his 1-run lead stand up in the ninth.

Error Costly

The Venezuelan got a disheartening break in that ninth when Wasdell made his fourth error—a muff of Hoag's drive down the first-base line—to put the tying run on base with none out. The situation became downright serious when Clift singled into leftfield to move Hoag to secnod.

But at this point Wasdell was again something of a hero for the Nats. On Sullivan's attempt to sacrifice bunt, Wasdell dashed in fast, scooped up the ball and, with a perfect throw to Lewis, forced Hoag at third. Thus reprieved, Alexandra took care of the last two Brownies nicely, forcing Grace, batting for Gryska, to fly out and Pinchhitter Beau Bell to hit a meek grounder to Lewis.

All told, the Nats made 18 hits today, four of them by Rick Ferrell, and three by Cecil Travis. But in the early innings they were merely

Johnstown Works Derby Mile in 1:38 3-5

Fastest Drill of Any Eligible for Saturday's Bluegrass Classic

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., May 3.—The Kentucky Derby favorite, William Woodward's Johnstown, said a gleeful "howdy" to Churchill Downs' track today with the fastest mile workout any candidate for Saturday's classic has run on the cuppy footing.

The long-striding bay took it easy for three-quarters and then went out in the final furlong to turn in a time of 1 minute 38 3-5 seconds for the full mile.

And, from start to finish, he did it easily.

This spectacular workout, a special move between races, stamped the son of Jamestown as the horse to beat in Saturday's sixty-fifth running of the Bluegrass classic.

The possible field was narrowed tonight by the definite withdrawal of Porter's Mite, owned by W. E. Boeing, Seattle airplane manufacturer.

The horse was believed to have been declared out largely because of his poor showing in yesterday's Derby trial and the fact that, although a fast sprinter, he apparently tires at a distance of a mile or over.

Other developments of a busy Derby day included rumors the chances of several previously-regarded probable starters were dimming, and the appearance of a large question mark over two others heretofore regarded as certain starters.

One of these, Joe W. Brown's T. M. Dorsett, came down with fever, Word was received in the Downs but was not definitely withdrawn.

Auker Checks Indians, Sox Win Game, 5-1

Carey's Error in 8th Costs Tribe Nemesis Shutout; Vosmik Star

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 3.—Eldon Auker, whose right-handed submarine ball offerings always are discouraging to the Cleveland Indians, twirled five-hit ball today to give the Boston Red Sox a 5-1 victory in the only game of the scheduled series.

Auker lost a shutout only because Tom Carey, subbing for grippe-stricken Joe Cronin at shortstop, booted an easy chance in the eighth inning. The Sox clinched victory in the seventh when singles by Joe Vosmik, Jimmy Foxx, Ted Williams and Bobby Doerr brought in four runs off Willis Hudlin, Cleveland starter. Vosmik got four blows in five trips, and Foxx three in four.

$50,000 Tiger Rookie Sent To Toledo

Hutchinson Puzzled Over Wildness Against Yankees

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 3.—Freddie Hutchinson, rookie right-handed pitcher whom the Detroit Tigers purchased from Seattle last winter, was released to Toledo, of the American Association, today under a 24-hour recall option.

Hutchinson made his first big league appearance for Detroit yesterday as the New York Yankees overwhelmed the Tigers, 22 to 2. He was wild and was touched for 7 runs in the less anan an inning that he worked.

Hutchinson was downhearted after yesterday's showing, saying he couldn't get the ball over the plate and "couldn't understand" why.

Club officials said the big hurler, who was a sensation in the Pacific Coast League last year, had expressed a desire to get into a spot where he would pitch regularly. He pitched for the Tiger batting practice before today's game.

The Tigers gave Seattle cash estimated at from $35,000 to $70,000, and three players—Tony Piet, Jo-Jo White and Bob Archie—for Hutchinson.

Outhit, Champions Capitalize on Walks Sundra Gets Victory

Detroit, May 3.—Three pitchers for the Detroit Tigers mixed themselves a lot of trouble by giving the New York Yankees eight walks in six innings today and the American League leaders made the most of it by winning their second straight, 10 to 6, although outhit.

Among the 11 safeties the Tigers collected off Steve Sundra and Johnny Murphy was Hank Greenberg's fourth home run of the season with Charley Gehringer on base in the third, but the blow was wasted.

The Yankees exploded three runs in the first inning on a pair of passes, Bill Dickey's triple and

Legg Wins 4 Events as W.-L. Takes Triangular Track Meet

Discussion Over Second Position

Central Only Team In Mile Relay; Tech Coach Sends Team to Showers

By Bill Burnett

Wally Legg, fleet Washington-Lee High trackman, raced away with individual honors of the triangular track meet yesterday at Central Stadium between the Little Generals, Central and McKinley High, just as his team walked away with team honors. Legg captured four of the 14 events on the card, assisting his team to a total of eight first places and a grand team total of 54.

There was some discussion as to the second-place winner, centering chiefly on whether the last event on the program, the mile relay, was or was not called off. Going into the final event, Tech held a 3-point advantage on the host team, and understanding that the relay had been called off, Coach (Rusty) Thompson sent his squad to the showers. Coach Hardy Pearce, of Central, understood otherwise and exercised a bit of strategy when he sent his relay team of Seldon, Porter, Bredbenner and Hayden out on the track to run alone. If the effort counted, Central took second, and if not the runner-up spot was Tech's.

The 100-yard dash, which was expected to feature the meet, went to Legg in 10 seconds flat, the Virginia speedster winning over Central's highly-touted Jim Zuppa by a scant yard. Though the race was run in heats, the three best times were recorded in the first heat. Al Toulotte, another W. L. sprinter, was a yard behind Zuppa at the finish.

For the second time in as many weeks, Al (Babe) Hayden cracked the interhigh 440-yard record when he led throughout and wound up with a brilliant time of 51.1. That was three-tenths of a second better than the former record. Toulotte, of W. L., ran a close second and probably helped in Hayden's performance by clinging desperately to his heels.

Legg's other winning efforts were in the 120 and 220 yard hurdles and the broad jump. His time for the shorter hurdles was 15.9 and for the longer event, 26.8. He leaped 20 feet 5¾ inches to take the broad jump easily. Had it not been for a tumble he took after clearing the final jump of the 220-yard hurdles, Tech's Bob Walsh might have won the event. He was pushing Legg at the finish.

Generals Win Over Riders By 7-3 Score

An unhappy third inning accounted for Roosevelt High nine's second consecutive defeat yesterday at Arlington, where Washington-Lee High slammed out a 7-to-3 victory. Three hurlers worked for W.-L., while Roosevelt allowed its star, Eddie Vermillion to go the distance.

McPherson started the Little Generals on their 5-run spree with a sharp single to centerfield. Clements sacrificed him to second and a rousing double by Payne scored McPherson. Owens got to first and Payne to third on Vitale's error, and the bases were loaded when Vermillion walked French. A fielder's choice and Jimmy Robertson's error put Kirchner on base and scored Payne and Owen, and Shepherd singled, to score French and Kirchner to close out the inning.

Chicago, May 3 (AP).—The benefit fund for Monty Stratton, maimed pitcher with the Chicago White Sox, was $30 richer today.

Sol Guttenplan, Brooklyn; Louis Silver, New York City, and Russell Higgins, Detroit, arrested on a disorderly charge in connection with the theft of tickets for the game from the box office window last Monday, had 30 pasteboards in their pockets when nabbed.

Today they told Judge J. M. Braude in boy's court they bought the tickets from a youth for $10. Judge Braude fined them $1 with the stipulation they each contribute $10 to the fund. They did.

High School Thin-Clads in Late Season Form at Triangle Meet

Post Staff Photos.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

(Bob Considine is on a brief vacation. While he is away his column will be written for him by prominent figures in the athletic world.)

By George Marshall

President, Washington Redskins.

The civilized nations of the earth are spending small fortunes to advertise their countries at two world's fairs in America today—the exposition at San Francisco and the fair at New York City.

The United States is the official host at both. This participation could not be possible without the help of the United States Treasury—without the help of the American taxpayer.

MARSHALL

I believe a Pan-American olympics, privately sponsored if necessary, but preferably with the cooperation of Uncle Sam, will do more for the promotion of friendlier relations between the peoples of the Western Hemisphere than anything else that could be conceived by mankind.

Doesn't Back Any Sport

It has been my pleasure to have been associated with a World Fair's activities. I know something about a fair. These events are supposed to be staged for the purpose of promoting better relations between nations. But in plain facts these fairs fail in that objective and generally limit their benefits to railroads, steamship lines, travel agencies, hotels, restaurants and hot dog makers. That's good, too, but why not admit it and quiet kidding the taxpayers.

It seems strange to me that the United States Government has continually and consistently refused to aid any sport, despite its value to the youth of the Nation. A President of the United States tosses out the first baseball at an opening game; the Vice President tossed out the first football at our Redskin game; but the Government does nothing by official act to encourage or develop any form of sport. Believe it or not, Mr. Ripley, the United States Government does not even appropriate money for sports at either the United States Naval Academy or the United States Military Academy!

The American Government appropriated millions of dollars to help the San Francisco and New York fairs this year. I do not object. But I insist if Congress appropriated $100,000 for a Pan-American Olympics, in which athletes from every nation in the Western Hemisphere would compete, such an event would do more to promote friendlier relations on our continent than the two fairs combined.

In 1937, it was my privilege to organize and supervise the first Pan-American games, held at the Pan-American Exposition at Dallas, with Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Peru, Uruguay, Venezuela, Canada and the United States participating. We had the finest athletes in the Western Hemisphere.

Proposes Pan-American Games as Permanent Fixtures

Tens of thousands of people saw the games. Newspapers, news reels and the radio reported the games to millions of listeners all over our continent. Radio broadcasts were sent out on short wave to all competing nations. More than 25,000 news stories were published in our American newspapers alone.

Every individual, who saw the games, went away with a new confidence in Latin-American relations. Our native visitors were impressed with the courage, the ability and the sportsmanship of the competing athletes from the other nations on this continent. The visiting athletes, in turn, were impressed with the sportsmanship, the fairness and the hospitality of the United States. Each athlete, on returning home, became an ambassador of good will for the United States.

I now propose the Pan-American Union, the governments represented in that union, and particularly the Government of the United States, take up the proposal of creating a permanent sports fixture for the nations of the Western Hemisphere. Any such effort on the part of the governments will receive prompt and energetic support from private sportsmen throughout the continent.

Terps' Annual Field Day Card Lists 6 Events

Saturday's Program Includes Baseball, Track and Lacrosse

By Jack Munhall.

The University of Maryland's spring version of "Hellzapoppin'" will be offered in six lengthy acts at College Park Saturday afternoon in the twenty-second renewal of its annual field day of athletics.

On the program is a freshman tennis match with Blue Ridge College; an interscholastic track meet; a dual varsity meet with undefeated Washington & Lee; varsity, intra-District tennis with Catholic University; varsity baseball with strong Washington College, and varsity lacrosse with powerful Baltimore A. C.

Although each and every event bears unusual promise, the interscholastic and varsity meets are billed as the features. Washington-Lee High is the defending champion in the open section of the high school cinder extravaganza and Bethesda-Chevy Chase in the division restricted to county schools of the state.

Competition Keen

The varsity competition between Maryland and W. & L. looms as one of the finest scheduled for track fans this season; a meet rivaled only by that between the Terps and Georgetown later this month. Both Maryland and the Generals are undefeated in dual appearances this season and the Old Liners are hopped up over a surprisingly fine showing in the recent Penn Relay Carnival.

Maryland's return baseball game with Washington College, which carried it into extra innings before losing, 7-6, at Chestertown last Saturday, will be the third of a busy week for Burt Shipley's improved nine. Today the Terrapins tackle William and Mary, and tomorrow they face Richmond. Both are Southern Conference engagements.

The Richmond contest is most important for Maryland. Having bowled over Duke defending Southern Conference champion, in an amazing upset Monday, the Terps could take a commanding position in the league race by defeating the Spiders who have lost only once this season.

Washington will furnish almost 50 per cent of the entries in the huge high-school meet, and Eastern is conceded a chance to cop the open title. The Lincoln Parkers have a well-balanced squad, and an especially formidable one-mile relay quarter which finished third in its class of the relays at the Penn Carnival.

Central with 26 entries will be most heavily represented. Eastern, with 25; Roosevelt, with 19; Western, with 8, and Gonzago Prep, with 11, are other District schools entered in the 13 open events.

Wide Open Battle

The battle for individual honors seems to be wide open, for only two scholastics will defend title won last year. Ted Merkle, Gonzaga, will risk his mile honors, and Lee, of Washington-Lee, will lay his 220-yard high hurdles crown on the line. The Ballston boy equaled the record of 25.8 in taking his specialty in 1938.

Mongomery-Blair, featuring Bill Fitzpatrick, a high jumper, capable of clearing 6 feet, heads the county division entries with 20. Hagerstown will send up 15, Bel Air, 13, and Frederick, 9. These teams are the principal contenders for Bethesda-Chevy Chase's team title.

Connie Mack Signs California U. Star

Philadelphia, May 3 (AP).—Connie Mack announced today in Chicago that he had signed Robert McNamara, star member of the University of California baseball team. He will leave California May 11 and join the Athletics in Philadelphia, Mack said. McNamara plays third and in the outfield.

—On Fishing

Doctor Bill Holton, Harold Vermeule and Dave Longanecker of the National Capital Casting Club were over to the Falls Church Chapter meeting of the Izaak Walton League Thursday evening for an exhibition of and instruction in the art of fly casting. This instruction is somewhat restricted, even though these meetings are open to anyone. Like instruction from these same finished anglers and many others of the club members is not restricted in any way down on the Lincoln Reflecting Pool every Saturday afternoon from 2 p. m. until 5 p. m.

ACKERMAN

The National Capital Casting Club will be hosts for champion casters from every section of the eastern United States this summer. Why not get acquainted now, with this fine bunch of sportsmen, who can, and will, make your sport far more enjoyable.

There has been a deluge of letters and cards from widely separated points heralding the starting of this season's first runs of fish. Even Capt. Harry Woodburn at Solomons took time out to write about his catch of 124 hardheads averaging between two and three pounds, taken across the bay. Another of his boats came in with 47, and fishing less than two hours. Capt. Ed Bowen has his boats all in shape, and is just as enthusiastic about the early run.

Plenty of Fishing

Capt. Buck Stevenson, over on the Eastern Shore, has been hitting them in the Choptank—his last card notes a catch of 88 hardheads. The real news, however, is from the Cape Charles section. Capt. George W. Lewis had a party of five surfcasting at New Inlet Beach and caught eight channel bass and two black drum.

Certainly good to know they are coming up the beach so fast—at the most, it can't be more than a couple of weeks before they will be all along the Maryland shore. The catches of sea trout continue to mount at Waschaprague, although the northeast weather slowed things up slightly over the week-end. On the North Carolina coast, there wasn't a thing doing. Several local parties went down, but most of them were back early. There isn't any fishing on the beach yet, and it has been impossible to get over the bar at Oregon Inlet.

In Montgomery County, the Bethesda-Chevy Chase chapter of Ike Waltons is about the keenest outfit on the raising and releasing of birds. In Prince Georges, it is the Prince Georges County Game and Fish Conservation Association. We like to tell you about their work for many reasons. It is interesting, instructive for the younger members, of inestimable help in bettering hunting, and last, because so many call to find out where they can get in touch with sportsmen raising quail, pheasants and other game birds.

456 Quail Released

The Prince Georges club just recently released 456 quail and 90 pheasants on over 125 farms in the county. They were birds cared for at club expense by Carl Frey, of Hyattsville, and Desmond Walker, of Mitchellville, over the winter, with a mortality rate of less than 20 per cent.

On hand now are 23 pairs of quail and four pairs of chukar pheasants from which it is hoped to raise this season several hundred birds for release next spring. In fact, plans are under way now to build enough pens to winter about 700 birds.

The spring release has become the accepted time, because it has been found that the birds released in two and three pairs, often mate with native birds, and in many instances have made strong coveys by fall.

Are you one of the many who have often thought they would like to try their hand at this fascinating game—and never done anything about it because you didn't know how little space was needed, or because you knew of no one to tell you what it is all about? If so, write LeRoy Trott, Hyattsville, Md. If you live in Montgomery County and want to try it, give Joe Perna (EM. 9089) a ring. The only qualification in either case is—that the birds are to be released.

Baering Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

The gate-crashers at the two world's fairs do all right until they start thumbing those motorized wheel chairs.

The chairs cost about three dollars an hour and so far no hitchhiker has run up any testimonial mileage. When we pay three smackers an hour for a chair we want a shave, shine and shampoo with it. They can also hook on a trailer.

That's a lot of money for a park bench with frozen brake bands.

Ray Flaherty Ill In Spokane; 'Skins Sign Fullback

The Washington Redskins received good and bad news simultaneously yesterday when it was learned Elwood Borch, 210-pound fullback from Washington State Normal College had been signed and Coach Ray Flaherty has been ill for a week at his home in Spokane.

Item 1 was gladdening because Mr. Borch won all-Tri-Normal Conference honors twice as a guard and as a fullback. He is reported to be an exceptionally fine line blocker.

Flaherty is believed to be suffering from sinus trouble.

Mrs. Frank Gould's Entry Is Favored to Retire Gold Cup

Warrenton Race Carded Saturday

Postman Home and Black Gold Entered By New Yorker; Nine Entries Announced

By the Associated Press.

Warrenton, Va., May 3.—Mrs. Frank M. Gould, of New York, will make a determined bid for permanent possession of the Virginia Gold Cup here Saturday with two entries to contend against the leading steeplechasers of the East in the gruelling 4-mile race over timber.

Ostend, who won legs on the cup in 1937 and 1938, is not entered but Mrs. Gould's colors will be carried by Black Sweep, winner of the Middleburg Cup two weeks ago, and by Postman Home. Black Sweep was purchased recently from Maj. Turner Wiltshire, of Middleburg, in an effort to retire the cup, top trophy of the Virginia hunting country, valued at $1,500.

Nine outstanding steeplechasers were announced as entries today by George W. Cutting, secretary of the race committee. The Gold Cup is the third race on the Saturday card, beginning at 3 p. m. at the Broadview course on the Hagner estate, 3 miles from Warrenton.

A horse to watch is Kingsland, owned and trained by Maj. Wiltshire. This entry took the Middleburg Hunt's point-to-point in the heavyweight division with Gerald B. Webb, jr., up.

Irish Buckle, owned by Mrs. George W. Cutting, the stout-hearted winner of the Warrenton Hunt's point-to point, will start in either the Fauquier Plate or the Warrenton Hunt Cup, and is considered a favored entry for either event.

Entries for the events follow:

Caster Gives 3 Hits, Macks Beat Chisox

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 3.—George Caster, Philadelphia Athletics' knuckle baller, held the Chicago White Sox to three hits, two of them a homer and a single by Joe Kuhel, to give the A's a 3-to-1 triumph and snap Chicago's winning streak at five today.

Victory ended a losing string of his own team at six.

Joe Gantenbein broke a scoreless pitching duel between Caster and Bill Dietrich in the seventh by doubling, advancing on a bunt and scoring on Bob Johnson's 435-foot sacrifice fly. Rookie Nick Etten followed with a home run.

Leonard Fails

Dutch Leonard, seeking his third straight victory, was a woeful failure. He lasted out the first inning, but only at a cost of five runs, compiled from five St. Louis hits and a base on balls.

Bud Thomas relieved Leonard in the second inning and was bumped for five runs during the fourth, fifth and sixth, after which Appleton took a one-inning turn before Alexandra got the job.

It was in the seventh inning that Newsom began to tire visibly after holding the Nats to seven hits, and they went to work on his 10-4 lead. With two out, Wasdell singled. Ferrell got his fourth straight hit—a double to center, and Pinch-hitter Johnny Welaj singled to cut the Browns' lead to 10-8.

In the eighth, they came up with two more runs after Buddy Lewis led off by beating out a bunt. Sammy West, Buddy Myer and Cecil Travis banged out the hits that were translated into runs, driving Newsom off the mound. Marcum got the job in time to dispose of Pinch-hitter Bobby Estalella with the bases full and two out, Estalella grounding to Clift.

Needing two runs to tie the game and three runs to win it in that ninth, what should the Nats do but go out and get 'em, as we were saying.

Giants Beat Reds, 6 to 4, In Weird Game

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 3.—The revived New York Giants dropped the Cincinnati Reds into third place in the National League today with their second straight triumph, 6 to 4, in a weird baseball display.

Each team used three pitchers, who gave a total of 19 passes to first base, three wild pitches and a balk. Adding to the fun were two passed balls, one of which scored a run, three errors, 14 men left on bases by each team and an assortment of hits reading downward from the home runs of Linus Frey and Billy Myers, of the Reds. The game required 2 hours and 51 minutes to play.

The Reds took a three-run lead in the first two innings on the homers, Frey's coming in the first frame after Bill Werber had received the first of eight walks distributed by Hal Schumacher in six innings.

Walter Brown received credit for the victory althought working only the seventh inning in which he gave up three hits and the tying run. Cliff Melton finished after Brown had been removed for a pinch hitter.

G.W. Frosh Bow To Little Terps In 12-9 Game

The University of Maryland freshman baseball team combed two George Washington yearling hurlers for 14 hits at College Park yesterday to win their second game against as many setbacks this season, 12-9, despite late enemy rallies. The Colonial used three pitchers and Maryland pair. Woodward, although he was relieved in the eighth by Van Nais, received credit for the victory, while Toby Bright who started for the Buff and Blue was charged with the defeat.

Maryland was off to a 10-0 lead, scoring four in the first and six in the third, but almost lost their ample advantage when the Colonials popped out with six in the sixth.

Today the little Terrapins journey over to the Hilltop to engage Georgetown's strong frosh.

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

It was Mr. George Creel who got us into the Yerba Buena Club at the San Francisco Fair. We think the Yerba Buena Club deserves special mention in any discussion of the fair if only because of its restaurant.

RUNYON

This restaurant, room and cuisine, will take rank with any on the American Continent. It is in a class with New York's Colony. The Yerba Buena is a women's enterprise and while there is some doubt about the fair as a whole making any money, the Yerba Buena will probably produce a ton of profit. That just shows you about women. Maybe they should have let them run the whole fair.

The Women's Club House Association, a sub-committee of the exposition's women's board, thought up the Yerba Buena. They got 1,500 founder members at $100 each and 6,000 contributing members at $100 each, then built a gorgeous club house as a rendezvous for women members and guests visiting the fair. You just ought to see that dining room.

A Ladies' Problem

A gentleman cannot get in unless with a lady member. We think Mr. Creel must have got us in on the strength of the membership of his wife, the former Blanche Bates. The rule is a species of torture to gentlemen unacquainted with lady members because they hear of the quality of the cuisine and almost go crazy standing outside listening to the sound of the eating inside, and thinking of the food.

There has not been a restaurant like the Yerba Buena on the West Coast since the days of Zinkand's or Tait's. The coffee served there removes some of the stigma on Western coffee generally. The Yerba Buena converted us completely to the theory that the national food problem should be turned over in its entirety to the ladies.

There are other more public restaurents on the fair grounds that are quite good. The Japanese have one where you have to take a day off to wade through a dinner consisting of some 20-odd courses in which rice figures prominently.

The French have a swanky little restaurent called the Lafayette where some swords said to have been carried by the Marquis himself are on display, and the Dutch have a neat spot with waitresses in Holland attire and cheeses that hold a cheese fellow like us practically spell bound.

Frisco Quite Breezy

We had dinner in the Argentine cafe and got a dish composed in the true Argentine manner, so the affable waiter swore, of rice and chicken. We thought it tasted a good deal like that thing you get in Cuba which has sea food in it besides the rice and chicken, although the waiter disagreed with us. He admitted he was not an Argentine, however, but a Spaniard, so our testimony was as good as his.

You must remember that all this time, anyway in between stops, we were riding around in wheel chairs with Mr. Charley Stanton. The young men who shove those wheel chairs are not only much obliging but loaded with information.

They first tuck you into the chair with blankets across your knees and around your feet, like those wheel chairs jockeys on the Atlantic City board walk on a cold day and for the same reason. San Francisco in April is quite breezy and also chilly to a visitor, no matter what those natives try to tell you.

Then, after making you comfortable, the wheel chair boys at the fair start telling you about the points of interest. They must have doned up a lot on the fair. They know how high every tower is, and who made the murals, and everything else. We could not remember those details over night.

Water, Lighting Effects

The builders of the San Francisco Fair have gone in strong for water and lighting effects. They have all the water in San Francisco Bay at their disposal, so they have all kinds of fountains, and lagoons, and pools, and the like, and over them they spread at night all the most gorgeous artifices of the lighting engineers. What they can do with lights nowadays is positively astounding.

Then of course the fair designers had those California flowers to work with. Never has there been such landscape trickery in the way of flower beds as you will find on Treasure Island and the wonder is they were able to do it so quickly on made ground. Another thing about California flowers that has always puzzled us is the way they bloom against breezes that drive us into an overcoat. They are either hardier or braver than we are and maybe both.

The general architecture of the fair is magnificent. The murals alone are worth a week of study. Probably the most impressive single structure is what is called the Tower of the Sun, because that is what first hits the eye, but the Elephant Towers are also beautiful and there are many other buildings of such grandeur that it seems a pity that they are to be erased as soon as the fair is over.

It always struck us that in this respect any big exposition represents a certain waste. There ought to be something more permanent left from all the effort that goes into them than the memory. But we suppose the overhead precludes the possibility of preserving them in their entirety. It would cost barrels of money yearly to maintain those beautiful buildings of Treasure Island just as mementoes and mementoes are no longer that valuable.

Sneed Defies Thompson to Driving Test

'Slammin' ' Sam Wants Each to Hit More Than One, However

Sammy Snead, who will play with Ralph Guldahl, Jimmy Thompson and Wiffy Cox in an exhibition here May 21 at Congressional, sent word to M. Parker Nolan, sponsor of the match, that he will face Thompson in a driving contest preceding the match, on one condition.

Snead wants them both to hit 10 or 12 balls, since if they hit just one and Thompson connected, he'd probably win. With each hitting several balls, Snead figures his average will be better, and he has more of a chance to hit the longest ball. And while the conflict is on, Ralph Guldahl, two-time National Open champion, will probably step in with the best swat.

The match is held at an ideal time to catch the entire foursome on top of their games, as Snead and Thomson will attempt to qualify for the National Open in Philadelphia the following day, and Cox will seek a place to the championship in the sectional rounds at Congressional, on the 22. Guldahl is now in training for a second defense of his Open crown.

Entries for Open Close May 6

District golfers, pros, amateurs and women, have entry deadlines next week for three important tournaments, topped by the National Open.

May 12 is the deadline for entries to the Chevy Chase Invitation Tournament, carded May 17-18-19, and the Maryland State Women's championship at Congressional, May 16 to 20.

Amateurs of member clubs of the U. S. G. A. are eligible for the Chevy Chase Invitation, with handicaps of 14 or under.

Mrs. R. W. Payne is taking the names of the participants for the Maryland Women's championships at the Kennedy-Warren Apartments. The entry fee is $2, plus a State handicap card, 50 cents.

Riggs-Sabin Match Okayed By U. S. L. T. A.

Columbia to Erect 1,400 Seats for Twin Bill Saturday

By Jack Munhall.

With little time remaining to prepare for one of the biggest things that ever happened to Washington in the way of amateur tennis, plans were rushed yesterday for the appearance of Bobby Riggs and Wayne Sabin in singles and doubles exhibition matches at Columbia Country Club Saturday.

A meeting was held at Columbia, and Clarence M. Charest, chairman of the club tennis committee, announced that the exhibition of Riggs, No 1 national player, and Sabin, the sixth ranking simon-pure star, has been sanctioned by both the District of of Columbia and United States Lawn Tennis associations.

Therefore, details for presentation of Saturday's twin bill were entrusted to the local U. T. L. A., of which A. K. Tigrett is president. Committees to take charge of the printing of tickets and posters, policing and parking, and the construction of temporary stands at Columbia were named.

According to present plans, 1,400 tickets will be printed for stands which will be erected at the east and west ends of the Columbia courts, three of which have just been resurfaced with Har-tru, and are in excellent shape. There will be 1,000 reserved seats at $1.10, and 400 reserved section seats at 55 cents.

Heading the committee in charge of obtaining stands is Winfree Johnson, president of the D. C. and A. A. U. His assistants are A. O. White, secretary-treasurer of the general committee; Ruddy Goeltz, tennis pro at Columbia, who was really responsible for Riggs' consenting to appear here, and Chet Adair, chairman of the Edgemoor Club tennis committee.

The umpires will be Tom Mangan, veteran local player, and Maj. C. W. Christenberry, who is credited with the great expansion of Washington's Junior Davis Cup squad which will benefit from the proceeds of Saturday's matches.

Tickets for the exhibition Saturday will go on sale at noon today at the Tennis Shop, 1019 Fifteenth street northwest, at A. G. Spalding's and the Columbia Country Club.

G. W. Defeats Monroe High In Tenth, 5-4

Nowland, Alexandria Pitcher, Allows Rivals but 4 Hits

Fredericksburg, Va., May 3.—George Washington High of Alexandria sent across a run in the tenth inning to defeat James Monroe High, 5 to 4, here this afternoon.

Alexandria's Ed Nowland was in fine form allowing his rivals only four hits and walking but two men. He was also given good support afield.

George Washington forged ahead in the third period with three runs off two Fredericksburg errors, a walk and a bad pitch. All the runs were unearned.

In the tenth with the count tied, 4-4, Alexandria filled the bases when two were out. A wild pitch by Heflin sent the winning run home and oddly enough the players name was Heflin and he had gained the sacks by the four-ball route. James Monroe waited until the eighth to overtake the visitor's lead but failed in their part of the tenth to send across a run that would have tied things up again.

Heflin allowed his lone single in the fifth. He walked eight men during the afternoon.

Hank Leiber, Arnovich Hit Homers; Phila. Thumps Whitehill, Root

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 3.—Hugh Mulcahy held Chicago to five hits, one a home run by Hank Leiber, while the Phillies pounded Whitehill and Root for a 4 to 1 triumph today.

The victory gave the Phils a clean sweep of the two-game series with the National League champions and boosted them into a tie with Chicago and Brooklyn for fourth place.

A home run by Arnovich, successive singles by May and Powers and Scharein's sacrifice fly gave the Phillies two runs in the second. They added another in the third on May's sacrifice fly with the bases loaded, and collected the fourth tally in the seventh on Martin's double, Reynolds' wild throw and Brack's single.

Leiber's home run came in the ninth.

Heelfly Wins Gittings Handicap by Six Lengths at Pimlico

Aethelwold Runs Second; Kenty Third

Winner Completes Mile and Sixteenth In 1:45; Second Off Track Record

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Racetrack, May 3.—Alfred Vanderbilt, who crashed the winner's circle yesterday for the first time in Maryland this spring, taking two races including the featured Rennert Handicap, came right back today with another smashing victory in the second running of the Gittings Handicap.

It was Heelfly who carried the cerise and white silks to a six-length score over W. L. Brann's Aethelwold, with E. R. Pike's Kenty third, another three lengths back.

Among the trailers was J. H. Louchheim's Pompoon, the odds-on choice, who tired badly in the stretch drive and was unable to gather even fourth money, losing that portion of the purse by a length to Isolater.

Much the Best

Heelfly was much the best in the Gittings. He was away slowly as Pompoon led to the first turn, to be replaced by Aethelwold, who set the pace into the stretch. Ocean Roll forced the pace with Pompoon well located in third position. Heelfly began his move after entering the backstretch, and once under way, he cut down the advantage of the leaders rapidly.

Turning into the home lane, Heelfly had collared Aethelwold and from that point to the wire it was simply a question of by how much he'd win. He completed the mile and a sixteenth in 1:45, just a second slower than the track record and those who fancied his chances in the betting collected $13.70. Vanderbilt earned $2,490 as the first portion of the $2,500 stake.

Pompoon apparently had no excuses and through the final eighth of a mile bore out, either through exhaustion or from pain in his ailing legs. He appeared slightly lame after the race.

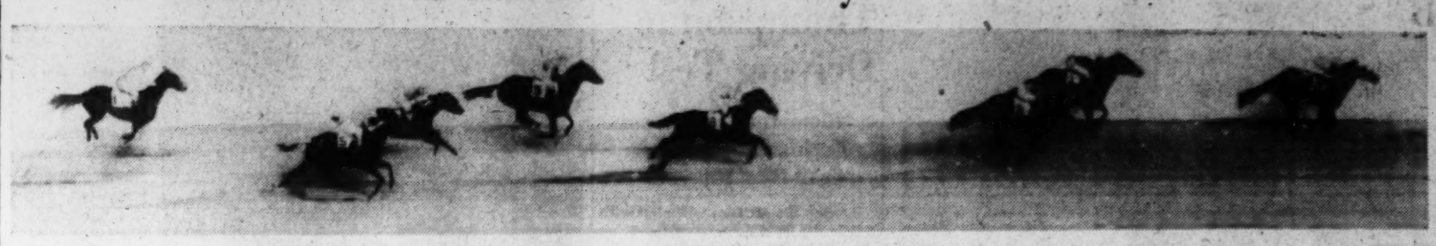
Loses His Backing

Pompoon, who had been looked upon as a logical favorite for the $20,000 Dixie Handicap, lost much of his following whereas Heelfly gained much by his race.

In the race previous to the feature, Brandywine Stable's Masked General stamped himself as a strong Dixie candidate as he turned back a smart field over a mile and 70 yards in 1:43 2-5.

Two favorites figured in a small Daily Double pay-off of $14.10 as the program began. Stepinfred, owned by Mrs. John Hay Whitney and trained by Dion K. Kerr, of Washington, made good for the choice players in the opening sprint for maiden juveniles. Paying a $5.20 mutuel, the son of Stepenfetchit shook off Pass Out to get to the front and had things pretty much his own way, winning by a length and a quarter from Pass Out with Third Covey third.

New Pimlico Track Camera Catches Every Horse in Position at Wire



The above picture is the product of the new "Photo Chart" camera being introduced in the East for the first time. Although the photograph appears to be one taken on the field in action, it is, in reality, a shot of each horse as his nose was on the wire in the fourth race at Pimlico Tuesday. As a horse reaches the finish line he is photographed from the tip of his nose to the end of his tail as he moves along. The horses (right to left) are Ponemah (10), Ambuscade (7), Scorch (3), Onisac (5), Flying Glee (9), Close Quarters (4), Be Prepared (5), Furr Buckle (1)

†R. C. Winmill-H. H. J. Thomas entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAPELO, $4.50, $4.20, $3.00; BAFFLER (entry), $12.30, $5.40; PRATTLER, $3.50.

SAPELO, jumping in good fashion and well handled, took command after opening half, drew out, was rated when BAFFLER was sent to front under hustling tactics, responded gamely when placed to drive and drew out to hold away thereafter. BAFFLER was a factor for turn of field, went to contention gamely, took command briefly and was tiring at end. PRATTLER was forward factor throughout, but was held safe. LITTLE DAN went to front in opening stages and dropped back to race evenly. COURT TIME lost rider at twelfth fence. WELL STEPPED lost rider at thirteenth fence. SLIEVEREIGH fell at third fence.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:45½. Off 3:49. Winner, Stablemount Stable's b. f. (3), by Stimulus—Destiny Bay. Trained by J. M. Milburn. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:15 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PREDESTINED, $15.70, $7.30, $5.40; PLOT, $5.50, $4.60; LATE PASS (Vaughan entry), $3.70.

PREDESTINED, slow to begin and far back to turn, improved position boldly on outside, was unhindered drive and was up in concluding strides. PLOT, first away, shook off LADY TIMAROLE to draw clear and weakened in closing sixteenth. LATE PASS was well placed from start, pressed pace of PLOT nearing stretch and held on gamely. OCTOBER ALE lacked early speed, saved ground to reach contention and closed gamely. PUZZLE DANCE was through early.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,500. The Old Dominion Handicap. Grade C. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:19. Off 4:19½. Winner, Brandywine Stable's ch. f. (5), by Pompey—Masked Ball. Trained by W. Mulholland. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $50. Time, 1:43 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MASKED GENERAL, $7.10, $5.40, $3.70; DRUDGERY, $8.40, $4.70; PICCOLO, $3.50.

MASKED GENERAL, not hurried in early stages while saving ground, was taken out for racing room leaving backstretch, moved up boldly and wore down DRUDGERY to win going away. DRUDGERY set a good pace and held on stubbornly. PICCOLO, closer than usual in early stages, was taken up slightly when in close quarters nearing stretch and came again strongly in closing test. PERNIE showed a good effort.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $2,500 added. The Gittings Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:45. Off 4:46. Winner, A. G. Vanderbilt's b. or br. h. (5), by Royal Ford—Canfli. Trained by L. McCoy. Net value to winner, $2,490; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100. Time, 1:45.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HEELFLY, $13.70, $5.30, $3.30; AETHELWOLD, $7.80, $4.50; KENTY, $4.90.

HEELFLY trailed field before gaining best stride, came to extreme outside when making move, drew out in stretch and was in hand at finish. AETHELWOLD set pace in early running, held on well when challenged, but was no match for winner. KENTY was hard hustled all the way, saved ground entering stretch and closed well. ISOLATER could never threaten the top once. POMPOON had speed for a half, but tired suddenly in stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:16. Off 5:16½. Winner, H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INVERMARK, $4.50, $3.80, $2.30; WHITE SAND, $3.20, $2.40; OLD NASSAU, $2.90.

INVERMARK opened a long lead while running on own courage, was given breathing spell entering stretch and opened up gap through stretch and was taken in hand in last sixteenth. WHITE SAND could not keep up in early running, made move on inside, but was no match for winner. OLD NASSAU dropped back at half-mile pole, came to outside in stretch run and just missed for place. BAIN MARIE trailed throughout.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:46½. Off at once. Winner, Mrs. W. PATIENT SAINT, off slowly, took command at half-mile pole, was steadied along while in front, held on well in stretch drive and just lasted. BAD DREAMS was slow to reach best stride, came to outside for racing room and closed fast. NANCY MAE, shuffled back entering backstretch, moved up gradually and closed fastest of all. ITALIAN HARRY moved up menacingly but tired in stretch. COUNTER PASS raced far back throughout and showed a dull effort.

Horses to Watch At Pimlico Track

MISS KSAR—This 2-year-old raced greenly in her initial appearance under colors. Will improve off that effort.

TULEYRIES LIN—This Feltner Stable made a killing with this one at Bowie and will come down in front here before the meeting ends.

PRATLER—A good jumper that was claimed when making his first start of the year. Will likely make the winner's circle next out.

PREDESTINED—A winner given in this box, will likely repeat, over a distance of ground.

PARSCOUT—Has been training well since reaching here from the Coast. Connections will find a spot before long.

At the Post

Pimlico, Md., May 3.

Bull Lea, Calumet Farm's Dixie candidate, pleased his trainer and thrilled the railbirds this morning when he reeled off a mile in 1:40 3-5. Jockey Irving Anderson was in the saddle and broke the son of Bull Dog—Rose Leaves at the eighth pole. Anderson had a snug hold on the colt throughout the 8 furlongs and finished out the mile and an eighth in 1:54 3-5. Trainer Kearns would like to get a race in for Bull Lea before the Dixie next Wednesday but if not he has no doubt about his star's condition. Maj. Ral Parr's Legal Light, 4-year-old stake winner forced out of training last autumn, was returned to the training grind this morning. Legal Light will be handled by H. Guy Bedwell and is expected to be seen under colors again by the late summer or possibly not until the Maryland season opens in September. A prominent candidate for the Pimlico Nursery to be run here Friday, May 12, displayed a creditable training effort this morning. The Nursery hopeful was Ella K. Bryson's Imprudent, winner of the Aberdeen Stakes last month. The filly was sent five-eighths in 1:03 4-5 handily. Jockey Manny Berg, a local boy, was the first rider to score a triple. Berg won with Greeny, Ponemah and General Mowlee making his Maryland spring season total 11. Humphrey Finney, field secretary for the Maryland Horse Breeders Association, distributed sales catalogues for the Merryland Farm dispersal to be held at Pimlico Friday, May 12. This will be an open sale comprising 36 head from William Elder's Merryland Farm and approximately a dozen more head from nearby farms. Two Preakness eligibles scored impressive victories yesterday on different fronts. Most important was Viscounty's triumph in the Derby trial at Louisville over Technician, Steel Heels and Porter's Mite. The other was War Dog in his first 1939 effort, a winning one over Equestrian and One By One, two other Preakness candidates, at Jamaica. War Dog now looms as a dark horse in the Preakness since it was his first start of the year and his victory was accomplished in such an easy manner. He is not a Derby eligible. Wayne D. Wright arrived this morning to have a leg up on Pompoon in the second running of the Gittings Handicap today.

BILL.

First race—Breaking Waves gets the call over this field of cheap Maryland-bred juveniles on the merits of fair races in good company. Has slight edge in an open race. L

Washington Permanent 58 Years Old

Building Association Assets Have Grown To $9,700,000

With total assets of $9,700,000 the Washington Permanent Building Association is just completing its fifty-eighth year. For over half a century this organization has contributed much to home financing in Washington. The first meeting of the Washington Permanent was held in 1881, with Charles Herman, president; George C. Walker, vice president; Gustave Hartig, treasurer, and Leonard Eckert, secretary.

One of the organizers and original directors was Eckert J. Sacks who at the age of 90 is the association's president, having served continuously for 58 years guiding the affairs of the organization.

Shortly after Washington Permanent threw open its doors for business rapid growth necessitated a removal from the original location over the hardware establishment of Gustav Hartig at the corner of Seventh and K streets northwest to the second floor of the German-American Bank Building at Seventh and F streets where Hecht's Department Store now stands. Continued expansion required even larger quarters until finally in March, 1907, the first home was acquired at 629 F street. In 1913 the building on this site was taken down and the present modern banking office and building was erected.

The service record of the three senior officers is noteworthy. In addition to Mr. Sacks with 58 years on the job, Carl J. Bergmann, treasurer, is rounding out 35 years, while John Henderson, vice president, has worked with the company for 33 years.

At the annual meeting yesterday all officers and directors were re-elected: E. J. Sacks, president; John Henderson, vice president; C. J. Bergmann, treasurer, and Hermann H. Bergmann, secretary. Directors are John H. Clipper, C. Rammling, James R. Ellis, Clyde H. Miller, C. Chester Caywood, Max Walten, Joseph N. Saunders and Walter B. Avery.

Kan. City Southern To Acquire Control Of La. & Ark.

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Kansas City Southern Railway Company yesterday to acquire control of the Louisiana & Arkansas Railway Co.

Under the unification plan, the Kansas City Southern will exchange its stock for stock of the Louisiana & Arkansas.

The ICC authorized the Kansas City Southern, in order to carry out the plan, to issue 510,000 shares of common stock without par value.

In support of its proposal to acquire control of the Louisiana & Arkansas, the Kansas City Southern said it would aid in the internal development of the Southwest, result in imrovement in service, promote efficiency and economy in operation, tend to preserve and promote competition and enable the unified system to compete with other systems on more nearly equal terms.

Wheat Prices Decline With General Rains

Closing Rally Erases Some of Early Losses; Corn Prices Lower

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May. 3.—Scattered rains in the grain belt and promise of showers in both winter and spring wheat territory touched off enough selling in the wheat pit today to depress prices more than a cent a bushel at times.

A closing rally, however, erased about half of the losses and wheat values finished ⅜-¾ lower than yesterday, with July 72½@72⅜ and September 72¾@72⅝, compared with lows of 72 and 72¼, respectively. Little rain fell in sections where most needed. Some of the late buying was attributed to elevators and mills. Flour business was reported to have improved, particularly in the spring wheat zone.

The private crop forecasts released today did little to clear up trade uncertainty regarding winter wheat conditions except to pave the way for the official Government report next week. The average of the six estimates of Chicago experts indicated a probable crop of 538,000,000 bushels, a reduction of 1,000,000 from the average a month ago, 10,000,000 lower than the April 1 Government forecast. However, the experts pointed out their figures reflected the recent less favorable conditions in the Southwest only partially. Many traders had expected lower forecasts.

Corn closed ⅝-⅞ lower July, 50⅜@50½ oats, unchanged to ¼ higher; rye, ¼-⅜ lower; lard, 2 to 5 lower.

April Business Halt Measured By Statistics

Index for That Month Is 86 Compared With 89 for March

New York, May 3.—The hesitancy of industry and trade over the past month can now be measured by means of some of the April indexes, according to the monthly statistical summary of the Standard Statistics Co. That organization's composite index of industrial production for last month is estimated at 86 (1926 equals 100), against 89 for March. The forecast for May is for a further drop in the index to around 83.

The strike of bituminous coal miners, in addition to affecting the index directly, also had a depressing effect on freight carloadings. The average of these for April was 553,000 cars per week, against 599,000 in March. The usual seasonal pattern is for April loadings to be considerably higher than March.

The steel industry operated at around 51 per cent of capacity last month as compared with 56 per cent in March. Comparison with a year earlier, however, was most favorable as the rate was only 33 per cent in April, 1938.

Building continues to be one of the brightest spots in the business picture, with April awards estimated at 5 per cent over the March total and the May forecast for a further gain of something more than 5 per cent.

Commodity prices receded further during April with the Standard Statistics index ending the month at 72.3, compared with 73.4 on March 31. The index for farm prices alone was off even more, from 66.4 to 64.6.

Stock prices suffered a decrease of 8 per cent during April and bonds were off 2 per cent. Sales on the New York Stock Exchange, already low at 25,000,000 shares in March, fell off to 20,000,000 shares in April.

C. & O. Control His for a Year, Young Declares

Baltimore, May 3 (AP).—Robert R. Young, board chairman of Allegany Corporation, top holding company of the former Van Sweringen rail empire, said today he and his associates would decide "within ten days" whether to pay all or part of a $2,375,000 note they signed to gain control of the corporation.

Young, here for Alleghany's annual meeting, said his associates had no intention of relinquishing their hold on Alleghany, which controls one-third of the stock of the valuable Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad. The management group's entire slate of directors was re-elected today, plus a new director, Henry J. Guild, of Adams, Mass., also nominated by the management. Later, Young commented:

"We've got Alleghany, sewed up right for the next year—there is no question about losing control."

U. S. Court Denies SEC Request for Reading Probe

Philadelphia, May 3 (AP).—U. S District Judge Oliver B. Dickinson refused today the Securities and Exchange Commission's request for an examiner to investigate the affairs of the $95,000,000 Philadelphia and Reading Coal & Iron Co., before any reorganization plan is considered in the bankruptcy court.

The commission has insisted that the reasons for the company having lost $30,000,000 in the past ten years, whether bondholders have any claim for the recovery of that loss, and whether the corporation can be rehabilitated should be ascertained, before any proposal is taken up.

Minority bondholders, represented by Archibald Palmer, of New York, have petitioned Judge Dickinson to appoint a trustee to take the company from its present management and plan its reorganization.

Judge Dickinson, rejecting the SEC petition, said that while an "examiner" differs from a "trustee," the reasons for the appointment of either are the same.

Palmer's petition for the trustee is pending before a special master who is also conducting hearings on the latest reorganization plan sponsored by four bondholders' protective committees.

Prices Advance in More Active Trading Copper Shares Are Leaders in Rise Scandinavian Bonds Are Strong

New York, May 3.—Sentiment swung more definitely to the long side of the stock market today. Prices advanced sharply in all groups to the accompaniment of a more respectable total of transactions. The size of the gains, which ranged to more than 2 points in some of the pivotals, no doubt could be traced to the thinness which has been so pronounced under drastic regulation. Today there was a complete absence of selling, either for liquidation or short account, forcing new buyers to bid briskly.

Domestic news, mostly of the negative sort, could scarcely have started the rally and kept it going. Brokers' analyses were, it is true, more optimistic, but such optimism was mostly from the long-range view, some even mentioning that a New Deal defeat in 1940 is indicated and, with fundamental forces working toward higher price levels in industry, it might be as well to acquire equities now.

Less far-fetched was encouragement resulting from the lull in Europe and competitive treaty-making, although it is obscure whether such steps are preliminary to or preventative for war. As financial and business observers have been making much of the improvement in commodity markets, it is likely that some buying of shares was stimulated from that angle. In former times, an upward trend in commodities has usually proved a harbinger of general business betterment. On this occasion, however, the more conservative analysts suggest the price bulge as due to war talk and prospects. Quite obviously, the munitions programs of large nations are stimulating to demand for many of the metals and farm products.

Activity a Good Omen

The rise today brought the general level of stocks slightly higher than that for last week, chartists being encouraged by activity as much as by the price improvement, arguing that a breakaway on the upside after recent dull and narrow markets is a favorable indication of immediate trend. The 100 key stocks closed 0.92 point higher on the day, the best performance for some time with transactions of 744,300 shares in 727 listed issues exceeding the combined totals of Monday's and Tuesday's sessions.

Copper stood out for size of gains and it is possible that a little short covering may have helped. The recent buying rush, resulting in metal sales at the largest total since October, 1938, was, however, reported by the trade to be about over. Advances in this group were, in the main, achieved on quite moderate turnover.

Motors continued to lead the market, Chrysler and General Motors featuring gains of 2¼ and 1⅞, respectively. Rubbers were in request with United States up more than 2, while an assortment of utilities, railroads and aviations were prominent in the most active list. Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck led merchandising shares higher with gains between 1 and 2 points.

Bonds were generally firm today although gains were much more moderate than in the share section of the market. Scandinavian liens were particularly strong on the German guarantee offer. Foreign exchanges were dull and about unchanged although the gold flow continued. Cotton was steady with closing gains of 2 to 8 points. Wheat, weak at the start, closed with a rally which narrowed losses to ⅜ to ¾ cent.

Bond Market Higher

Listed bonds moved forward readily today on a modest return of inquiry. All groups advanced in the thin market, with speculative obligations showing larger gains than soundest investment media. Foreign dollar securities especially were in demand, owing in part to the apparently pacific gestures by the German government toward Scandinavia. Turnover was $6,100,000, which remains far under normal, but still is better than recent dull markets.

Scandinavian bonds moved 1 to 2 points higher on the better peace prospects in that part of the world. Australian and Canadian bonds likewise gained, while Belgian and Polish bonds were irregular. German, Italian and Japanese obligations were dull. A little interest was taken in Latin-American default bonds, but there was not much enthusiasm behind the buying.

Medium-priced carrier issues did well owing to reports of profitable operations by some key systems. Gains of a point or two were common, especially in the semi-investment issues, while borderline and default rails also improved. Alleghany Corporation bonds jumped on small trades, but utility holding bonds were quiet. Convertibles reflected the improved tone of equities. Local tractions advanced with the rest and other special groups likewise were in modest favor.

Canada Offers Great Opportunity For Development

Montreal, May 3 (Candian Press). Canadia still offers one of the "greatest fields in the world for expansion of population and development of natural resources," Sir Edward Beatty told shareholders today at the annual meeting of Canadian Pacific Railway Co.

Sir Edward made the observation during a summing up of his address in which he predicted the company, taking into consideration all present economic conditions, may look forward with greater confidence to the immediate and distant future than railways in most other countries."

"Unfavorable returns" of the last year were due, he said, to a combination of circumstances peculiar to Canada. The Dominion, in common with other countries, suffers from the disturbed conditions due to international, political, and economic stresses.

"One of its major industries—that of grain growing—has suffered from drought and from abnormally low prices for its product. In addition, your company conducts its business in competition with another railway generally paralleling it throughout the country and subsidized by the state. While the effect of the competition of highway transport is not as marked as in some other countries, it is accompanied by severe competition from inland waterways."

Nearby Futures Lead Advances In Cotton Trading

New York, May 3 (AP).—Nearby cotton deliveries scored the largest advances today as buyers refused to sell except at mark-ups. Closing levels were 2 to 8 points ahead. Most of the spot month selling that did appear came from Bombay, although a holiday in that market kept operations at a low level.

Trade option, according to cotton observers, is veering more and more to the belief the export subsidy plan is going to run into strong opposition. Consequently, they added, the tight situation in the spot delivery is liable to continue until old crop months go out of trading.

Hedging sales in the July, October and December deliveries accounted for a good part of the activity. Support came chiefly from trade-price fixing orders and buying by New Orleans brokers and ring professionals.

New York, May 3 (AP).—A World's Fair visitor wearing a ten-gallon hat asked a page boy on the gallery overlooking the busy floor of the New York Stock Exchange today:

"But where do they keep those bulls and bears I've heard about?"

The page boy did not laugh.

Because yesterday a New Yorker in a derby hat asked him:

"What's the blue flag over there on the wall?"

The blue flag on the wall was the flag of the State of New York.

General Motors Issues Report To Its Workers

Sales Dollar Outgo Includes 50.6% for Materials, 28% Wages

New York, May 3.—General Motors Corporation has just issued its first annual report to employes commenting upon its 1938 business from the standpoint of developments particularly interesting to its 200,000 workers.

Among the questions discussed in the report are: How was business in 1938? How many jobs were there? What was the total pay roll? What was the amount of taxes the business paid? How profitable was the business? How was the sales dollar divided?

An important feature of the report is an illustration showing how the sales dollar was divided. A "business tree" splits up the total sales dollar into its various outgo items, the size of the branches of the tree indicating the relative importance of each. It brings out that materials, supplies, freight, etc., account for 50.6 per cent of the total outgo. All wages and salaries, other than those of executive management, are second in importance with 28 per cent.

How Sales Dollar Goes

The complete sales dollar outgo per cent includes:

Materials, supplies, freight, etc.	50.6
Wages, salaries other than executive management	28.0
Taxes	6.5
Dividends	6.9
For renewal of plants and equipment	4.4
Pay of executive management	0.5

Pointing out that "Jobs depend on customers," the report declares: "The amount of work to be done in General Motors last year was less than the year before because we had fewer customs. Sales of cars to dealers in the United States dropped 44 per cent and sales in dollars of all our products fell off 34 per cent, compared with 1937. Number of jobs in the business was 28 per cent less than the year before. The average number of men and women employed in General Motors last year was 189,000."

"And speaking of partners," the report continued, "we must not overlook the fact that 390,000 partners own G. M. General Motors is one of the most widely owned of all American business organizations. Our stockholders come from every State in the Union, and from almost every county. They are from every walk of life. The great majority of them are small investors. There are many more stockholders than employes. Thousands of employes are also stockholders."

Electricity Output Gains Over Year Ago

New York, May 3 (AP).—Electric power production in the United States during the week ended April 29 totaled 2,182,727,000 kilowatt hours, a decline of .7 of 1 per cent from 2,199,022,000 in the preceding week but 12.6 per cent ahead of 1,938,660,000 in the comparable 1938 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The decline was more than seasonally expected and the Associated Press power index, based on 1929-30 as 100, dropped to the lowest of the year at 112.7. This compared with 113.4 in the previous week. A year ago the index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 103.2.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"Do not expect your partner to bid something you can bid yourself," was the sage advice given by an oldtime expert to one of his enthusiastic students. The invisible score sheets are littered with the points players have lost in failing to bid the full extent of their hands.

S. O. presents a typical illustration. He missed a slam on this hand and wants to know the reason why. Our oldtime expert could tell him. Here are the cards:

North
♠ A 10 9 8 6 5
◇ A Q 9 7

South
♠ K J 7 2
♡ A K 7
◇ J 10 8 6
♣ A

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	4 ♣
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

S. O. missed the grand slam; 14 tricks are in the hand! He writes: "My contention was that North should have shown his diamonds, and then I could have bid either clubs or diamonds, and reached a slam in spades or diamonds. Who was at fault?"

South underbid dreadfully. It was up to him to carry the hand to a slam, whether or not his partner showed the diamonds. Most players would force immediately, bidding three diamonds over one spade, rather than making a simple double raise. Regardless of the first response, however, South's pass was the height of timidity.

Skill at making squeezes often justifies over-optimistic bidding, and this hand, which was played at the Hotel St. George duplicate game, in Brooklyn, by Dr. A. A. Sinson and A. A. Jaynes, illustrates how a fine player can overbid and get away with it.

The double indicated that the spade finesse would lose, so in this respect Mr. Jaynes was forewarned, but this does not detract from his excellent technique in developing the double squeeze. (A double squeeze is one that acts on both opponents.)

The heart king was led and taken by the ace in dummy. The diamond was played and East won, returning a heart, with declarer ruffing.

Realizing that his only chance to make the contract lay in forcing West to protect hearts and clubs, and East spades and clubs, Mr. Jaynes removed the last trumps and cleared the way for the squeeze by playing the spade ace, the Vienna Coup, to leave the queen as a menace card in his hand.

After cashing the spade ace he led another heart and trumped, to clear the suit from East's hand, and then ran his diamonds, forcing three discards from each adversary. Dummy discarded two spades.

Upon the lead of the last diamond, if West keeps the heart queen and unguards the clubs, the heart ten is thrown from dummy. If he throws the heart queen dummy keeps the ten, which then is high, and discards the low club.

East is the next to be squeezed. If he keeps the spade king he must unguard the clubs, and if he holds the clubs he must let go the king.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Both interest and inducement have gained tremendously in The Post-A. F. G. E. "Beauty With Brains" contest.

The entries are arriving in numbers that assures a fair representation of the big Federal field. But more are wanted, for the deadline on candidacies, May 5, is almost here. So if you know of a girl who has a pretty face and something behind it, ask her to come to The Post and enter the contest.

The inducements are attractive: The winner receives a handsome silver loving cup from The Post and an all-expense trip to the New York World's Fair from the American Federation of Government Employes.

There she will be the center of attraction on Federal Employe's Day and will be appropriately entertained.

The runner-up will receive an all-expense trip to the fair, from the A. F. G. E. and an engraved silver pitcher from the Jewel Shop. The A. F. G. E. also will afford trips to the fair for the four semi-finalists. This group will not go to the fair on Federal Employe's Day, but will have the opportunity of going with large groups from their respective departments or agencies.

The point now is to get the entries into the contest. It should be a representative field.

Personnel Director Seymour Paul announces that vacancies exist in three positions in the Personnel Division of the Panama Canal's Executive Department. Qualified applicants are invited to submit statements of their education and experience for the positions. These are examination analyst (salary about $4,000); training personnel assistant and personnel assistant (maximum salaries of $3,250). The ages in the last case should be between 25 and 32.

"Qualification requirements for the positions are similar to those for the same levels in the Federal departmental service," it was stated. Inquiries concerning the duties and minimum qualifications can be sent to Balboa Heights or to the Washington office of the Panama Canal.

Several Federal officials, stationed in Washington, are expected to take outstanding parts in the Annual Institute of Government to be conducted by the University of Southern California in Los Angeles from June 12 to 16. Among those expected to attend are: Samuel H. Ordway, of the Civil Service Commission; James Grady, of the FCA; Lyman S. Moore, of the Office of Education, Interior Department; Howard B. Myers, WPA, and Edward Warner, CAA.

Note from the little paper published monthly by A. F. G. E. people in the Adjutant General's Office: "Here's hoping the AGO will get its share of the money appropriated for raises by Congress. We know we are a goodly third of the personnel of the War Department, and that we have less technical and professional men which fact keeps our average salary below the average for the whole Government service. It is further hoped that accruals from lapses, leave without pay, etc., will be used for administrative promotions and not for additional clerical help."

Bob Burns Says—

I declare, it takes a lot to please these modern children. It ain't like it was when I was a boy. Papa use'ta give me a home-made sling-shot and then he'd point out some animal tracks to me and I'd amuse myself all day—killin' bears.

I was visitin' a friend the other day and he has a boy that ain't but six years old, and he sits around all day long just readin' the newspapers. The night I was visitin', the father brought him one of them expensive electric trains just to get the boy's mind back to childhood matters. After playin' with the train for about five minutes the boy went back to readin' them papers again. The father was awful hurt and he said, "Son, why don't you like your new train?"

And the boy says, "Oh, it's all so absurd. They're ain't no accidents or strikes on it."

Gillette Leads Singing as Clerks' Officers Banquet

Shedding Senatorial dignity, Senator Gillette, of Iowa, Tuesday took command of a piano and led legislators and Federal workers in a harmonizing session after a Willard Hotel banquet of the Government Employes Benefit Association, whose officers are convening here.

Previously Representative Randolph, of West Virginia, presented the key to the city to Association President Patrick McGovern. Representative Ramspeck, of Georgia, spoke on his bill to extend the civil service act to persons now exempt.

J. Leighton Cornwell, of the Justice Department, declared lack of a suitable armory and municipal stadium were twin "disgraces" to Washington.

Her Majesty the Queen:

Queen, Devotee of Gardening, Personally Tends to Grounds

Interests Include Landscaping and Innumerable Pets

By Lady Cynthia Asquith.

Chapter XXII

As the owner of a country home during these last years, Queen Elizabeth has found time to become a blissfully happy and very successful gardener; a taste and talent inherited from her mother. Her sitting room at Royal Lodge is always full of books on gardening and gay with flowers of her own growing.

When she first came to Royal Lodge the garden was very wild, so there was plenty of scope for her skill and energy; in fact, her first activities had to be mainly destructive. In this work of demolition she was nobly assisted by His Majesty, who wielded the hatchet with immense vigor and with great effect.

Now that the ground is cleared, she goes in for landscape gardening with great fervor and gives particular attention to the planting of young trees, always going with the woodman to say exactly where each one is to be planted. She does a lot of tree-pruning herself, and is occasionally to be seen walking about armed with a long pruning fork, trimming the old oak trees while the children follow just behind drawing a tiny cart into which they heap all the little branches their mother cuts down.

Devoted to Pets

The King, the Queen and both their daughters are equally devoted to dogs. Between the four of them they possess a fine assortment making up a pack of no less than eight.

At Royal Lodge, safe from the public and the camera, the little princesses have spent their happiest hours reveling in all the messy joys of gardening and the blissful possession of innumerable pets. Besides the dogs there are fawns (only half tamed), 15 budgerigars and—best of all—the beloved ponies on which they ride so keenly.

The Queen very often leads Princess Margaret's pony round the grounds, and every Sunday afternoon the whole family—father, mother and two children—go to the stables with their hands full of apples and carrots for the horses and ponies. Taught by Mr. Owen, who has been their father's stud groom for 15 years, both the princesses ride very well.

Tenants at Glamis meet King George, Queen Elizabeth and Princess Elizabeth during a garden party. The King and Queen were Duke and Duchess of York when this picture was made

Up until six years ago King George and Queen Elizabeth used frequently to spend week-ends with friends, but once they had acquired a country home of their own they showed increasing reluctance to tear themselves away from its sheltered delights.

Summers at Glamis

During the months spent away from home the same visits were repeated year after year. Every single August the whole family has gone up to Scotland to stay at Glamis.

To eyes and ears accustomed to the crowds and noise of Piccadilly, the seclusion and muffled silence of Glamis must indeed make a wonderfully wide contrast, and for imaginative children one can scarcely think of any setting more impressive than the huge castle, with all its battlements, turrets, legends and ghosts. Imagine the thrill of mounting the gaunt, winding staircase of the great keep; its reverberating stone steps so wide and cold to small bare legs. Then Duncan's Hall, dimly lit and presided over by an immense stuffed bear (perhaps a little disquietingly unlike a teddy bear) and the great stone crypt, with its armed soldiers of past centuries; burnished sentinels standing at perpetual attention against the bareness of the walls.

To rediscover these and many other almost awful delights might well make the first morning of the little princesses' yearly visit almost too exciting after a long night journey, and it must be rather a relief for them to push open the heavy, studded door and find themselves in all the color and fragrance of their grandmother's lovely garden, and then to run, followed by several bounding golden Labradors, across the smooth green lawn to the famous sun dial, with its 81 separate dial faces, to find out "what Mr. Sun is doing today."

Christmas With King

Every single Christmas was spent at Sandringham, with the one exception of that of the year 1935, when Queen Elizabeth was obliged to stay in bed at Royal Lodge with an attack of influenzal pneumonia, the first serious illness she had ever had. Her husband remained with her, but Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose traveled with King George and Queen Mary to Sandringham, so that they should not miss spending Christmas with their devoted grandfather. Their father and mother did not at all like this separation, but when they realized that this Christmas was to be King George's last, they were very glad they had made the sacrifice.

To Be Continued.
